U. S. Sub Is Rammed; Stays Afloat in Gale

Navy Ship Hits Tusk In Atlantic; All 88 Safe

By Robert F. Loftus

With Second U. S. Task Fleet in the North Atlantic, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—The 1800-ton submarine Tusk, with 88 officers and men aboard, was rammed by a Navy supply ship during a North Atlantic gale 17 miles off Labrador today, but managed to surface and head back for Argentia under destroyer escort.

First reports to Vice Adm. D. B. Duncan, Second Task Fleet Commander aboard the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, indicated no lives were lost.

(A later report from the Navy at New London, Conn., said that no one was killed and no one seriously hurt.)

Comdr. R. R. Hay, skipper of the 13,800-ton supply ship Aldebaran, which rammed the Tusk, reported the sub came up under the bow of his ship about 12 noon (10 a. m. EST), apparently trying to make a mock torpedo attack.

Radio, Radar Knocked Out

The impact heeled the Tusk over sharply and flattened her superstructure, knocking out all her radio and radar communication.

Only the fact that the Tusk was making a submerged run and was completely buttoned up at the time averted what probably would have been the worst submarine disaster in the Navy's peacetime history.

A Navy press relations officer at New London said that most of the officers and many of the enlisted men had served at length in the Washington area and were widely acquainted here.

The collision was in 1300 fathoms of water, and submarine experts aboard the Roosevelt, 50 miles to the north at the time, said

State of Siege Is Declared In Colombia

Bogota, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—President Mariano Ospina Perez declared a stage of siege in Colombia tonight and troops immediately marched into Bogota to maintain order.

Soldiers with machine guns patrolled the streets and halted automobiles in a search for concealed weapons.

The people were panic-stricken and began fleeing for their homes, but later the city was calm.

Perez announced the state of siege, dissolved the National Congress and set up a 9 p. m. curfew 2½ hours after a congressional commission visited him and told him it would explore means of impeaching him.

The Liberal Party's decision to seek impeachment of the President was made public by Senator Lleras Restrepo a few minutes after the meeting with Ospina.

The congressional delegation that met with Ospina was headed by Torres Barreto, president of the Chamber of Deputies. It was believed the liberals would charge that the President had disrupted the juridical order in the country and had denied the nation its elementary rights. The two charges were contained in a communique published yesterday in Bogota's liberal newspapers.

Conservative party quarters said the liberals had been warned that any attempt to impeach the President would result in the declaration of a state of siege and the dissolution of Congress.

Tonight's development climaxed a battle waged for months between the Conservatives and Liberals over the November 27 election.

P-38 Gave No Hint of Trouble, Tower Man Tells Crash Probe

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Two air traffic controllers told a Civil Aeronautics Board panel yesterday how their routine was plunged into turmoil for minutes before the Nation's worst plane disaster November 1.

Testimony by Glen Tigner and Robert B. Union, National Airport tower operators on duty when 55 persons died in front of their eyes, highlighted the first day of the inquiry. The panel is trying to determine cause of and fix responsibility for the collision between a Bolivian P-38 and a DC-4 Eastern airliner.

Under steady grilling for more than two hours, the 21-year-old Tigner acknowledged that he possibly could have been using the wrong radio channel when he tried to steer Erick Rios Bridoux and his P-38 away from the liner.

But he denied that Bridoux ever hinted he was in trouble or asked for emergency clearance. The Bolivian fighter ace, now hospitalized in Alexandria, failed to respond to landing instructions given twice just before the crash, Tigner said.

A packed boardroom in Interdepartmental Auditorium listened attentively as Tigner unraveled a story of frantic efforts to avert the crash.

Lodestar Had Just Landed

He revealed that a twin-engine, twin-rudder Lockheed Lodestar transport had just landed on one runway without instructions before Bridoux took off in his P-38.

And Tigner confirmed reports that a B-25 had made a simulated instrument landing—or at least "a low approach"—over the same runway about three minutes before the fighter plane and liner collided in their descent.

The B-25 was recorded in the tower, but not by Tigner, as passing over at 11:43 a. m., he testified. The crash is believed to have occurred at 11:46 a. m. Bolling Air Force Base officials have said the B-25 landed there at 11:48, when an Air Force tower operator looked into the sky to see the crash planes meet.

Tigner's testimony of the B-25's presence added weight to the belief that Bridoux may have mistaken it for the "No. 1" craft after he had been given clearance to land as "No. 2."

Bridoux is reported to have said he did not see the DC-4 until one of his P-38 engines sliced it in half.

Panel Chairman Robert W. Chrisp, chief of CAB hearings and reports division, asked Tigner:

"Do you think the pilot of the P-38 or the pilot of the DC-4 could have seen the B-25 when it pulled up and out?"

"I don't know," replied Tigner. "I don't have much recollection of the situation at that time on the B-25's position."

Signals Not Acknowledged

Tigner, the eighth of nine witnesses called yesterday, insisted that Bridoux asked for landing instructions. But he failed to acknowledge them twice, so Tigner desperately called to him to "turn left, turn left" when it appeared the two planes were ready to crash.

When this order brought no results—Tigner said Bridoux kept on his course—the DC-4 was ordered to pull off to the left. As it obeyed, the two planes rammed together and plunged into the Potomac River, less than a mile south of the runway.

Tigner was subjected to a barrage of questions about his radio communications with the two planes and with others in the vicinity.

Board Member Harold A. Jones told Tigner to tell "in your own words" what went on between the two aircraft just before the crash.

"I don't recall Eastern 537's (call signal for the DC-4) position entering the traffic pattern," Tigner said.

"When he was on 'downwind' turning to 'base' (approaching the runway) to land on Runway 3, it was after Mr. Union advised me that Bolivia 927 (the P-38's call

Soviet Gives Warning in U. N. She Is Ready for Any New War

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Russia warned in the United Nations today that she is ready to "trade blow for blow" in any new war.

"There is no need for any war," Soviet Delegate Amazasp A. Arutiunian told the General Assembly's political committee, "but we don't fear any such eventuality. We are well prepared to trade blow for blow."

Arutiunian made the statement in an effort to bar the Western powers from the former Italian colony of Libya, strategic North African territory that served as a battleground in World War II.

The tough Soviet warning failed, however, to sway the committee, which recommended overwhelmingly that Libya be granted independence by January 1, 1952, with the Western Powers taking a big hand in interim administration.

Talk of war was heard earlier—from a different point of view—when British delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan told the committee debating the atomic problem it was "intolerable" that Russia should subject the world to "fear of an atomic war" by refusing to accept the majority-backed atom control plan.

The plan for Libyan independence still has a rough road to travel before it will be final.

Although it was approved in committee in paragraph-by-paragraph votes that far exceeded the two-thirds needed for final passage by the full Assembly its ultimate fate hinges on what the U. N.'s 59 members decide to do about the other two segments of Benito Mussolini's former empire—Somaliland and Eritrea.

It appeared likely the majority would insist that proposals of all three of Italy's former colonies be considered as a "package" and that the final decision be taken in a single vote.

Death Twice Thwarts Reelection to Office

Philadelphia, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Two men who died several days before yesterday's election were re-elected by Pennsylvania voters.

Thomas A. Crowley, who died last week, was re-elected tax collector of Steelton. He had held the office for 24 years.

John Miller was re-named constable of Easton's sixth ward. He died Sunday.

The offices will be filled by appointment.

Held as Small-Fry Gambler, Man Puts Finger on 'Sponsor'

A prisoner arraigned yesterday as a small-time gambler was instrumental in putting the finger of the law on an alleged more important numbers operator, who as a result, last night reposed in the cell block in Municipal Center.

When Clarence M. Simms, 65, of 1317 Emerson st. nw., was brought before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence on a charge of possessing lottery slips he proclaimed his innocence. He declared he had accepted horse bets from a police operative as a favor to a numbers collector named "Sam."

The commissioner commented that if Simms was a patriotic citizen he would swear a complaint against "Sam," adding it was high time higher-ups were apprehended instead of small fry.

"I'll swear out a warrant against anyone that hurts me," exclaimed Simms. Thereupon, Lawrence reduced his bond from $1500 to $500 and continued his case until November 16. And Simms signed a complaint against Sam Leyman of Silver Spring, Md.

Last night, armed with a United States commissioner's warrant, Pvt. Clarence W. Knotts, who picked Simms up in a barber shop at 5503 Colorado ave. nw, October 28, took Leyman into custody at 993 Linton st., Silver Spring.

Leyman was booked on a charge of setting up a gaming table. Simms seemed more cheerful as he was remanded to District Jail.

6.14 Pct. Gas Rate Boost Approved

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Effective Wednesday, gas rates for District consumers will be an average of 6.14 percent higher under rate schedules approved yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The Washington Gas Light Co. had asked for approximately a 7 percent boost.

The PUC-approved increase will add 24 cents to the average Washington homeowner's monthly gas bill, which now runs to $3.31. For those homes using gas for heating as well as cooking, the hike will mean an 83-cents-a-month increase.

$749,520 Operating Revenue

The new rate schedules, granted after lengthy and bitter public hearings, are estimated to provide the company an additional yearly operating revenue of $749,520. The firm had sought $900,000 in extra funds.

Small "hot plate" consumers will bear the largest share of the revenue increase. The minimum monthly gas bill is raised from the present 75 cents to $1.

The Federal Government, whose yearly gas bill was slated for about an 11 percent reduction under the company rate proposal wound up receiving a 2.86 percent increase.

By classes of consumers the new revenue will be derived percentagewise as follows: domestic, non-heating — 8.01 percent; space heating — 5.07 percent; commercial and industrial (non-heating)—5.57 percent; seasonal off-peak — 7.71 percent; wholesale apartments —1.78 percent and Government (the company's largest customer)—2.86 percent.

"Obviously Inadequate"

The PUC ruling commented on behalf of the gas company that evidence clearly showed a return on investments of less than 4 percent which "is obviously inadequate to maintain the company in a sound financial position."

But the company's full rate boost request was shaved, the PUC opoinion stated, for these principal reasons:

1. Unusually mild weather during the test year ended May 31 was a large factor in the firm's low level of earnings.

2. An expected increase in the volume of gas business "will undoubtedly tend to increase revenues during succeeding years if normal temperatures prevail and

3. The rate base should progressively decline as the company pays off more and more of the cost of changeover from mixed to natural gas.

Labor Costs Cited

In support of granting the increase, the PUC said operating costs, principally labor, have risen too high to offset the cheaper cost of servicing natural gas.

The rate proceeding, which began last July 28, was fought all the way by William A. Roberts, attorney for the Washington Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, and the Bureau of Federal Supply.

Alleged unfair competition by the company in promotion of sale of gas appliances and the company's inclusion of some promotional and merchandising costs in its general rate base were the

Happy But Cautious Democrats Doubt Vote Puts '50 in the Bag

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A reinvigorated drive to push the Truman Fair Deal through the election year session of the Eighty-first Congress was presaged by Tuesday's Democratic election sweep.

"Harry's got himself another mandate," was the Capitol Democratic reaction.

But a note of caution entered Democratic jubilation as the New York Senate-Mayoralty victory broadened into almost a Nation-wide pattern.

Privately, Democratic leaders were telling party workers to regard the off-year break as an "incentive" rather than "1950's in the bag."

There were indications, too, there may be some "gloved-handling" of the more explosive points in the Truman program before the 1950 legislative "musts" are really set.

While a Democratic resurgence was almost everywhere apparent in Tuesday's scattered State and local elections, all the Democrats had collected nationally was a net gain of one Senate and one House seat, Republicans and Southern Democrats still command a majority of both Houses.

The 1950 Democratic goal is to produce really controlling Truman legislative majorities.

At least one GOP leader, meanwhile, frankly admitted that the Republican Party, as evidenced again in Tuesday's election, "is in a bad way . . . the people know it is in a bad way."

Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, told a National Press Club luncheon the Republican Party needs "a tremendous lot of rebuilding" to become again a potent political force.

Predicting Republicans eventually will win their fight against "stateism," Guy George Gabrielson, new GOP national chairman, meanwhile set out to try to refurbish it.

Gabrielson announced this schedule of personal conferences with Republican leaders: Salt Lake City, Utah, November 11 and 12; Reno, Nev., November 14; Berkeley, Calif., November 15; Los Angeles, November 16 and 17; Topeka, Kans., November 18, and Kansas City, Mo., November 18.

Election of former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to the Senate on the Democratic-Liberal ticket over Senator John Foster Dulles, GOP foreign affairs expert, touched off the Democratic rejoicing. Wins in two House contests and most local elections made it a jubilee.

But as lagging returns from up-

Lewis Orders Miners To Work for 3 Weeks As 'Act of Good Faith'

Urges Householders To Fill Coal Bins; Steel Back-to-Job Speedup Expected

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis, who marched his miners out of the pits 52 days ago, yesterday marched them back in again.

The United Mine Workers' leader, in a characteristically surprising maneuver, ordered the 380,000 striking soft coal miners to return to work at once "as an act of good faith" for the "public convenience."

The back-to-work directive, approved by the union's 200-man policy committee in Chicago, was limited to midnight November 30. In the interim, a union statement declared, Lewis will explore the "remote possibility" of reaching an agreement with the operators.

Lewis urged "private householders and public institutions" to take advantage of the strike suspension and fill up their coal bins in case he finds it necessary to order out the miners again "in the event that the contemptuous arrogance of the coal operators remains undiminished." This statement is believed to indicate that the miners will be asked to march out again if Lewis and the mine owners fail to agree to a new work contract.

The abrupt halt of the bituminous coal strike is expected to speed up the back-to-work movement in the steel industry. A fourth major producer, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, yesterday reached an agreement with the CIO Steelworkers along the lines of the Bethlehem formula. The Nation's No. 1 steelmaker, United States Steel, begins its negotiations with the union today, and industry sources expect an agreement by the end of the week.

There was no explanation from Lewis for his sudden about-face on his traditional policy of "no contract, no work." He insisted that the official union statement speaks for itself. This statement said:

"As an act of good faith designed to contribute to the public convenience, the United Mine Workers will again make another contribution of major magnitude to enhance the remote possibility of an agreement being reached."

Other Reasons Suggested

Washington labor officials speculated, however, that there were four other—and more urgent—reasons impelling the Lewis move:

1. That the 200-member policy committee, assembling from all parts of the country, reported to their president that their people—on strike since September 19 and working three days a week for many weeks before the walkout—were in financial distress.

2. That with credit having been cut off in many company stores after 30 days, Lewis felt his miners ought to be given the opportunity to earn a little money for Christmas.

3. That the operators—who have been opposing Lewis' demands for contract "improvements" and who in turn have been demanding certain contract changes—have so far held their lines intact, and won at least the first round in the industry's annual war of nerves.

4. That Lewis, who hates all forms of Government intervention, feared that some drastic form of Federal intervention was in the offing, and acted to prevent such action.

The operators' view of the strike suspension was expressed in this fashion by John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association:

"It was pressure from the coal miners back home. We feel this

'New Trend, New People' Seen In Arlington, Alexandria Vote

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

"A new trend, new people, new ideas."

That is how Tuesday's election results looked yesterday in Arlington to F. Freeland Chew, long-time member of the Arlington County Board.

His description, echoed by hundreds of other Arlingtonians, could apply equally in Alexandria.

For in both of these Washington-bordering communities of northern Virginia, voters took off the old and put on the new, so far as local issues were concerned.

In Alexandria, it was the advisory nonpartisan referendum. By a 755-vote margin, Alexandrians gave a people's mandate to their governing officials to adopt a new city charter and do away with partisan politics in local elections.

Independents in Majority

In Arlington, the nonpartisan issue came up, too. Basil DeLashmutt, a county board member for the past 10 years, ran on a Democratic ticket and was licked by Robert M. Cox, an independent, described yesterday by Mrs. Florence Cannon, another county board member, as the "youngest budget officer in government." He is with the Federal Communications Commission.

Cox's election gave independents on the county board at least a simple majority on future votes. It was being interpreted countywise as giving the "new" county residents the chance they've been asking for to put into effect many long-awaited public improvements which have been the bane of the county board for years.

New Tax Board Anticipated

Daniel A. Dugan, another independent board member, predicted Cox's membership on the board will give it a chance to "respect the majority's wishes on

Gambling Jury Sees 2 Guns, $26,084 Cash

Seventy-four exhibits, including $26,084 in cash, two revolvers and hundreds of numbers slips, were introduced in evidence over vigorous defense objections yesterday in the gambling trial of William (Snags) Lewis and 13 others.

The exhibits were taken in two truckloads from a pine-paneled, air-conditioned room of a bungalow at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md., on March 25, the Government said. Lewis and the others are charged with operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate there from January, 1948, until the day United States marshals raided the bungalow.

Edward J. Geraci, deputy marshal, spent the entire day on the witness stand identifying the exhibits for the jury of nine men and three women.

Judge Explains Ruling

Judge Matthew F. McGuire emphasized that he admitted all the evidence "merely to show the character of the establishment in Maryland, and only that." The Government still has to link the evidence with the defendants, and with violations or District gambling laws.

Other evidence admitted included 20 bullets, a telephone, a

Dissident Admirals Left Off Navy's New Promotion Board

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy named an important new promotion board yesterday and officers immediately noticed that not one of the top admirals who opposed Defense Department policies on Capitol Hill had a place on it.

This fact was of particular importance to four Navy captains who also took part in the unification row and who are to be considered for promotion to rear admiral. The selection board of nine admirals meets here Monday.

Navy men took particular note of the fact that Adm. Richard L. Conolly—who was originally slated to head the board—was not included. Conolly, commander of naval forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, was one of the admirals who testified as part of the "Navy's case" against Pentagon policies.

Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, chairman of the Navy General Board, was named president of the selection board instead.

The four Navy captains who took part in the defense policy controversy and who are expected to be up for promotion are:

Capt. John G. Crommelin, Navy flier who blew the lid off the row; Capt. Arleigh A. (Thirty-one Knot) Burke, head of "Op 23", the now disbanded Navy unit which did the staff work for the Congressional

4 Firemen Killed As 2 Engines Hit

Baltimore, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Two fire engines collided late today at a Northwest Baltimore intersection, killing four firemen and injuring several others.

One of the vehicles was a hook and ladder, going north, the other a hose truck, going west. They met in the center of the intersection. A witness said firemen were bounced off the engines like "so many tenpins."

The fire? It was a small blaze that was put out without difficulty.

Bonus Plan Wins Approval in Penn.

By The Associated Press

Pennsylvania approved, in Tuesday's election, 500-million-dollar plan to join 17 other States in providing bonuses for World War II GI's. A similar New Jersey proposition apparently was defeated.

Pennsylvania's Gov. James H. Duff warned, however, that "this is a very great sum of money and it is going to have to be raised by more taxes and everybody is going to have to help pay for it."

Non-Residents Eligible

New York State war veterans now living elsewhere were made eligible for the State veterans' bonus.

A State constitutional amendment to this effect was approved by the voters Tuesday.

Texas voted to keep the poll tax which cost them $1.75 a year to vote. They rejected all other proposals that would have increased taxes.

Texans voted down a proposal that women be permitted to serve on juries and seven of the 10 constitutional amendments in that State lost out.

Two apparently were adopted, the unofficial vote-counting agency reported. One — a proposal for trials without jury to determine insanity—hung in the balance today.

In Tennessee, voters turned their backs on tradition and approved a call for a constitutional convention limited to exploring nine recommended revisions in the 1870 constitution. Eleven previous attempts had failed.

School Aid Voted

Elsewhere in the scattered voting areas, Kentuckians voted at a 2-to-1 rate to increase State aid to poorer school districts.

California voters definitely indicated they don't like the State's 1-year-old pension setup. The electors swept the George McLain welfare scheme out of the State constitution.

Voters endorsed proposition No. 2 which will put the welfare department back to the control of a director appointed by the Governor, and return pension administration to the 58 counties.

Connecticut Reelects Two Socialist Mayors

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 9 (AP)—Socialist Jasper McLevy was re-elected Mayor of Bridgeport for his ninth consecutive term, another Socialist Irving Freese, was re-elected Mayor of Norwalk for his second term and the Republicans scored a decisive victory in Waterbury in yesterday's elections.

Republican Mayor Raymond E. Snyder's reelection in Waterbury by an 18,554-vote margin—the biggest plurality that city has ever given any candidate, whether in a city, State or national election—overshadowed the outcome of the other contests.

The closest city contest was in New Haven where the Republican incumbent, William C. Celentano, won a third successive term, defeating Richard C. Lee, Democrat, by only 702 votes.

Socialist Irving Freese, mayor of Norwalk, who won two years ago by more than 3800 votes, found his plurality yesterday whittled down to 1273.

Hartford's Mayor Coleman won reelection when he polled 21,678 votes, about 2000 more than his closest rival, Councilman Thomas.

Westport switched to the Republican column when W. Clarke Crossman won the first selectmanship from the Democratic incumbent, Albert T. Scully.

Greenwich remained Republican, as it has been for a half century, by reelecting first selectman Wilbur M. Peck for his sixth term.

Oleo and New Ballot Win at Ohio Polls

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 9 (AP).—Yellow oleomargarine, by mandate of the voters, will be placed on sale in Ohio grocery stores.

But will the office-type ballot replace the party-column ballot in Ohio general elections?

Both received the approval of a majority of the citizens who voted on the issues in Tuesday's election. Yet, the Ohio Supreme Court ultimately may have to decide whether the new type ballot has been adopted.

A proposed constitutional amendment, which would have allowed more than one probate judge for each county, was rejected.

If the new ballot is adopted voters in the 1950 general election will have to mark an "X" beside the name of each candidate they favor. The candidates will be grouped by offices, the politics designated beside each name. No longer will the voter be able to mark an "X" at the top of a party-column ballot and thereby vote for every candidate in the column.

Poll Tax Foes Resume Fight For Repeal

By The Associated Press

The manner in which the Campbell constitutional amendments were smothered in Tuesday's general election brought prompt calls yesterday from leaders of the successful opposition for a constitutional convention to pave the way for repeal of the poll tax.

Republicans who didn't have a look-in in the State-wide races for elective offices joined antiorganization Democrats who led the anti-amendment fight, in requesting the General Assembly to clear the way for a constitutional convention.

Democratic organization leaders, including Gov.-Elect John S. Battle, who supported the amendments, reserved comment on the defeat of the suffrage proposals by more than three to one.

Miller Is Confident

But Francis Pickens Miller, anti-organization leader who bowed to Battle in the Democratic primary for Governor in August, said he had confidence that the Assembly would reach a satisfactory conclusion on the poll tax problem.

Miller, unlike Robert H. Woods, Republican State chairman, didn't see the returns on the amendments as any mandate to the Assembly. In a statement that sounded almost conciliatory Miller said:

"A solution is in the hands of the General Assembly, in which I have complete confidence. I am in favor of a limited objective convention—one chosen to act on the poll tax repeal problem only. I am not advocating a convention to rework the entire constitution next year. This will have to come later."

Miller said he regarded defeat of the amendments as "only a decisive repudiation of a plan that had too many uncertainties in it. The vote was overwhelming evidence of the good sense of the people of Virginia."

Delegate Robert Whitehead, another leader of the opposition, and Senator Lloyd M. Robinette of Lee also called for a constitutional convention to act on the poll tax problem alone. They fought the amendments at both sessions of the General Assembly, which approved the proposals before they could be submitted to the voters.

So decisive was the defeat of the amendments that election officials stopped their count of votes before the complete totals had been reached. When the Associated Press halted its tabulation with 217 of the State's 1760 precincts missing, the count stood:

For the amendments, 50,939; Against, 177,588.

On the matter of State-wide elective offices, the Democratic candidates, members of the organization wing, won in a walk.

Battle was a better than two and a half to one winner over his Republican opponent for Governor, Walter Johnson. Returns from 1443 precincts gave Battle 147,548 to 57,902 for Johnson. Clarke T. Robb, Social Democrat, polled only 4340 on the basis of the same number of precincts.

Lieutenant Governor L. Preston Collins and Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., also were easy winners. Collins topped McGuire 145,344 to 53,547, with returns in from 1430 precincts. Almond was reelected with the vote in 1427 precincts 145,538 for Almond to 44,348 for Sydney Moore, Social Democrat.

Makeup of the new House of Delegates will be 91 Democrats, seven Republicans and two Independents.

state New York districts filtered in, Lehman's Senate lead dropped below 200,000, less than half the margin some Democrats had predicted.

With returns from four districts uncounted, Dulles brought an upstate margin of 587,624 into New York City. There Lehman topped him with 784,111 lead.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, whose own political fortunes were involved in the outcome, told an Albany news conference the Truman Fair Deal was actually "set back" by the returns.

Dewey said he based his statement on the fact Dulles "ran well ahead of local tickets all over the State." He said Lehman, with minority party as well as Democratic backing, won by less than 2 percent of the total vote.

Dulles, said Dewey, "has every right to be proud of the campaign and of the progress he made, as I am."

President Truman yesterday received from Dulles, the following telegram: "You win."

As final tallies flowed in from the Nation's scattered elections the Democrats found plenty of reason to rejoice.

Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York piled up a 1,264,000 winning total for reelection, leading his nearest rival, Republican-Liberal-Fusion Candidate Newbold Morris, by 308,430 votes.

Representative Vito Marcantonio, nominated by the Communist-supported American Labor Party, trailed O'Dwyer by 908,177. Marcantonio received 356,423 votes.

In California's Fifth Congressional District, Democrats picked up a Republican House seat. John F. Shelley, president of the California State Federation of Labor, was elected to serve the unexpired term of the late Republican Representative Richard J. Welch.

The vote stood: Shelley, 78,877; Republican Lloyd J. Cosgrove, 52,354; and Charles R. Garry, Wallaceite independent 5031.

In the only other House contest, in New York's Tenth District, Democrats elected their first Democratic Congresswoman, Mrs. Edna Kelly, to the House seat formerly held by a Democrat, the late Representative Andrew Somers.

The net one-seat Democratic gain means this new House lineup: 262 Democrats, 170 Republicans, one Democratic-Liberal, one American Labor and one vacancy.

Assuming that a Republican succeeds the late Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), and a Democrat replaces retiring Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), Lehman's election means this Senate division:

Democrats, 54; Republicans, 42.

In State and local elections there were only two real GOP bright spots, in New Jersey, where Republicans reelected a Governor, and in Buffalo, where another GOP mayor was elected.

But even GOP elation over New Jersey's election of Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll over Hague-backed Elmer H. Wene was tempered. For Wene ran 210,000 votes stronger than the 1946 Democratic candidate for Governor. In other words, even though Driscoll won, Democrats showed a 6 percent gain.

Seventy-three-year-old "I Am The Law" Hague, who stepped out as State Democratic leader after Wene's defeat, wasn't the only political boss toppled in Tuesday's elections.

Mayor James Michael Curley of Boston, one of the last city bosses of the old school, was defeated for election to a fifth term by another Democrat, City Clerk John B. Hynes. Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin backed Hynes against Curley.

In other Tuesday election developments:

Republican mayors made way for Democrats in Syracuse, Binghamton, Rome, Port Jervis and four other New York contests. Republicans displaced Democratic mayors in Glens Falls, Lockport and Ogdensburg, N. Y., however.

Democrats swept four city offices in a Republican stronghold, Philadelphia, for the first time since before the war, and Democratic Mayor David L. Lawrence was reelected in Pittsburgh.

In Cleveland Mayor Thomas A. Burke won his third straight term and emerged as a possible 1950 Democratic opponent of Senator Taft (R., Ohio) for the Senate.

In Louisville, Ky., where Democrats barely won the last mayoralty contest, Democratic Mayor Charles Farnsley was comfortably reelected.

Detroit's spirited mayoralty election was "nonpartisan." Municipal Treasury "Watchdog" Albert E. Cobo beat CIO-supported George Edwards.

Defeat of proposals to repeal the poll tax in two States, Virginia and Texas, meanwhile sparked a new drive to pass a Federal anti-poll tax law at the next session of Congress.

Jubilant Democrats, Americans for Democratic Action and spokesmen for organized labor kept mimeograph machines hot with exultant comment.

"The scare-word campaign has backfired," said ADA National Director Charles M. LaFollette. "The people have said again . . . that they still want liberal, imaginative, competent government."

Representative Kirwan (R., Ohio), chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, called it "a real vote of confidence" and said it means Democrats are "in a most favorable position" for 1950.

U. S. Employes May Now Seek County Offices

A Civil Service Commission ruling yesterday cleared the way for Federal employes to fill elected and appointed offices of Fairfax County, Va.

The ruling applies to offices of the county board of supervisors, and to about 68 nonpartisan appointive positions. The Federal employes running for election to the board of supervisors will have to do so as independent candidates.

Basis for the CSC ruling is Section 16 of the Hatch "clean politics" act giving the Commission authority to let Federal workers participate in strictly local government in areas of Maryland and Virginia adjacent to Washington. The commission can use the authority for communities where a majority of the voters are employed by the Federal government, or where other "special or unusual" circumstances exist.

In line with this arrangement, Federal employes living in the Fairfax County towns of Falls Church, Vienna, Herndon, and Clifton had previously been permitted to participate in town politics, but not in county politics.

The CSC action grew out of an appeal from the Fairfax County Federation of Citizens Associations for permission for Federal employes in the county to take part in county politics on a nonpartisan basis.

The CSC said its approval for the plan was tied to five conditions:

1. The Fairfax Federal employes, in their local political activity, must not neglect their official duties and must not take part in non-local partisan politics.

2. They must not run for local office as party candidates, nor become involved in campaigning for party candidates.

Run as Independents

3. They have to run as independents and campaign in a strictly nonpartisan manner.

4. A Federal employe elected to a full-time local office must resign his Federal job. He may take on part-time office if it does not interfere with Federal duties. His agency is the sole judge of whether the employe's local office conflicts with his Federal duties.

5. Permission to a community for local political activity by Federal workers may be suspended or withdrawn by the CSC when it finds the resulting activities "detrimental to the public interest or unfavorable to the proper enforcement of the (Hatch) law and rules."

zoning matters, and to establish a tax equalization board."

The Arlington County vote Tuesday—totaling 14,129—set a record for a general election in a non-presidential year. Interest in the close county board race, as well as in the controversial Campbell amendments, is believed to have set the record.

In Falls Church, voters also settled a question which had been the subject of hot debate: Shall one man hold two city jobs simultaneously? The voters said "no," in giving a 29-year-old lawyer, A. Burke Hertz, a 202-vote margin over incumbent LaRue Van Meter for the job of city commisisoner of revenue. Both are Democrats.

In the post-election discussion, Van Meter, who is also city attorney, said he thought antagonism over tax bills, sent out just before the election, had hurt him. Hertz said he had expected a closer race.

Later he promised full cooperation with the "city attorney and all other city officials."

On State-wide issues, the election results in nearby Northern Virginia held no surprises. The local area, composed of 112 precincts, gave 7589 "yes" votes on the Campbell amendments and 19,572 "no's."

In the gubernatorial race, here was the tally: John S. Battle (D.), 16,629; Walter Johnson (R.), 8068; Clark T. Robb (Soc.-Dem.), 902.

In the race for lieutenant governor, L. Preston Collins, incumbent Democrat, got 16,651 votes to 8245 for E. Thomas McGuire (R.). For attorney general, J. Lindsay Almond, jr. (D.), got 16,733 votes to 6773 for Sidney Moore (Soc.-Dem.).

Big Three Statement On Germany Today

Paris, Nov. 9. (AP)—The foreign ministers of the western powers met at length today and said progress was made on changes in "their joint policy in Germany." However, they announced no decisions.

The representatives of the United States, Britain and France decided at a seven-hour session to take up all aspects of the German question. French sources said they also put on the agenda the questions of bolstering Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and recognition of the Chinese Communist government.

Meet Again Today

Diplomatic sources said they believed United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman had reached tentative agreements on Germany, and will draft a formal statement of the results when they meet again Thursday when the conference is expected to end.

A brief communique at the end of the meeting said only that "satisfactory progress" was made.

"The foreign ministers of the United Kingdom, the United States and France met this morning and this afternoon at the Quai d'Orsay (French foreign ministry) to consider a number of problems of common interest, notably the general line of their joint policy in Germany," the communique said "satisfactory progress was made and the conversations will be resumed tomorrow."

An American informant said "the whole German situation is being gone into step by step."

Acheson will visit Bonn, capital of the West German republic, Sunday. He will talk with United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy, President Theodor Heuss and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

McCloy and the other high commissioners are here for the conference.

The talks on Germany, it was reported, revolved about:

Economic problems of the western state.

Ending the policy of dismantling of industries for reparations.

Allowing German diplomatic representation abroad on the consular level.

Several methods of modifying the technical state of war still existing with Germany.

Devaluation Just a Word To Workers

By J. A. Livingston
(Third in a series)

Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain's highly intellectual Chancellor of the Exchequer—of whom Churchill is said to have said, "There but for the grace of God goes God"—has shied away from Paul G. Hoffman's plan to integrate Britain and western Europe into a customs union.

Not that Cripps is unmindful of the power of Hoffman's purse, not that he doesn't want Marshall aid to contnue, and not that he's uncooperative. But Cripps, like other British government officials, is caught up in a net of history. He's looking to—he's held fast by—the past.

And perhaps he's a bit afraid of the future.

I talked to Cripps in his plain, comfortable office (none of the rich graciousness of John W. Snyder's sanctum in Washington) in the Treasury Building at Whitehall. Right off, Cripps took me by surprise. He mentioned a simple, pat prescription for Britain's ills. Hoffman gave me the same line of reasoning just before I left for England. It's this:

British sales to the United States amount to only one tenth of 1 percent of the total of United States absorption of goods and services. Let Britain increase its shipments to the United States to one third of 1 percent, and Britain's dollar gap could be closed, presto! Total involved: Less than a billion dollars. Piddling in the huge 250-billion-dollar American market!

Struck by Backwardness

I said I thought that was easier said than done. I told him that in Coventry, Birmingham, Manchester and other industrial strongholds of Britain I was struck by the backwardness of shipment methods, and that therefore I had doubts Britain could readily sell in the United States.

For instance, British freight cars are only one third the size of those in the United States. How much additional loading and unloading, coupling and uncoupling that must take, how many more man-hours to move merchandise.

Cripps—and this is the surprise—rushed to the defense. Before the war the British railroads were the most efficient in the world. Furthermore, the British railroads had been built many, many years ago. The ancient tunnels, bridges and tracks would not readily take the larger locomotives and freight cars used in America.

That was just the point. The very structure of the British railroads militated against catching up with American efficiency. They'd have to be rebuilt from the roadbed up. It would take years.

Along the same line: The British telephone system is obsolete compared with ours—buzzing on the line, slow dialing, frequent disconnections. The system's overloaded.

Ditto the cities. London, Manchester, were not built for a modern world. Traffic in London seldom moves faster than 15 miles an hour. Congestion is just as nerve-wracking as in the United States but with less traffic. There's no through artery, and so on.

I observed that in British factories the tempo, the productivity, was not so great as in the U. S. After all, the American worker has twice as much mechanical horsepower back of him as a British worker. As A. W. Menzies, superintendent of the Armstrong-Whitworth Aircraft, Ltd., Coventry, told me: "At the end of the day an American isn't as tired as a British worker, but he has accomplished more." Of course, part of the British worker's fatigue is due to longer hours—45 as against our 39. But part of it is due to his performing more manual tasks—lifting and carrying things to and from machines. American plants are better tooled than British plants for assembly line, quantity output. Our factories have a a bigger volume per man.

Sir Stafford suggested that the two production systems were not comparable. Britain is not a mass-producing nation. Historically, British manufacturers always produced in small batches for specialized markets: India, Australia, Brazil, France, Argentina, and presumably they'll continue to do so.

Some Cloth Superior

In certain types of woolens and cottons, they make a far superior product than the United States. If only the Americans were willing to buy, if only we'd loosen up on our customs procedures and lower tariffs, then the British would be able to sell. Unless the United States adapts itself to its position as a creditor nation the British problem can never be solved. Again, I felt Cripps was defending. Also fearful.

Cripps and other British officials aren't sure the United States will assume the creditor's role and make loans abroad and increase imports. This country is used to high tariffs, to high exports. We're not accustomed to imports. So the British want to be shown.

That's why Cripps is not willing to go along with Hoffman's plan for a customs, or economic union, with Europe. He wants to hold in reserve the so-called sterling bloc. He's apt to point out that 50 percent of the world's trade is carried on in sterling. Why? Because nations have to use a currency that they can get hold of. And they can't get hold of dollars. We won't let 'em. The dollar can't supplant sterling as a trading currency until the United States, by its investment and trade policies, makes it plentiful instead of scarce.

U. S. Next Tuesday to Hear Italy's Complaint That Customs' Red Tape Cuts Exports Here

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Italy will be the next important trading country to air its grievances and offer suggestions to American authorities about the red tape of American customs procedures.

An Italian group, made up of officials and businessmen in this country, will open discussions with officials of the Bureau of Customs next Tuesday. The Italians will cite examples of what they regard as unfair and out-of-date rules that block entry of their goods into the American market.

Their visit will follow nine days of meetings among British, Canadian and American customs authorities. These meetings, a joint statement said yesterday, were "extremely helpful and certain to be of value" in simplifying American and foreign customs procedures.

To Call in Field Men

Later in the month officials of France, Belgium, the Netherlands and possibly other European countries will be invited to discuss their customs difficulties with American authorities.

When the Treasury has received all the foreign complaints and suggestions, it plans to assemble its customs collectors and appraisers from all the 45 customs districts to discuss the problem. Treasury Secretary Snyder announced yesterday this conference would be December 5 and 6.

Snyder will be able to tell his chief field officers of the Administration's policy of encouraging imports from abroad.

The Treasury plans to ask Congress early in the next session for legislation amending some of the regulations that now hamper foreign sales here.

During their nine days of meetings here the British and Canadians discovered that the Treasury can do comparatively little to ease the rules by administrative action. They spent one of their nine days in the customs appraisers' stores in New York, seeing just how the law compels American officials to classify and value foreign goods.

The joint statement yesterday said "the foreign delegates gained a clearer understanding of the problems faced by the United States in striving for simplification in a field where any major easing of requirements will necessitate legislative changes."

The Americans not only listened to British and Canadian complaints, but, according to the statement, told their visitors of "instances where their practices were thought to have handicapped United States exporters."

Although the statement said no specific proposals were drawn up, it promised that the representatives of all three countries would make "further explorations" of customs snags that have not yet been removed.

To avoid going over the same ground in the coming talks with the continental European countries, the Economic Cooperation Administration will show the record of the British-Canadian-American meetings to officials of other governments that have customs troubles here.

Then, if a foreign government has new grievances to cite, it will talk about them directly with the American customs experts.

The Italians are especially eager to start these talks, for they have planned an ambitious export drive in the U. S. The U. S. recently slashed tariffs on many important Italian products, but in Italian eyes American customs regulations are a major obstacle to their earning more dollars in the American market.

Soviet-Argentine Votes in U. N. Bring Down House

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 9 (U.P.). A Russian-Argentine comedy act brought down the house at the United Nations today.

Argentine Delegate Jose Arce started it off when it came his turn to vote in a roll-call balloting on the Italian colonies, using the Russian "NYET" instead of the Spanish "NO."

Soviet Delegate Amazasp A. Arutiunian was not to be outdone. When his turn came, he shouted "si," the Spanish for "yes," instead of the Russian "da."

Russia Withdrawing Troops From Germany, Paper Reports

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 9. (AP).—The German newspaper, Abendpost, said today that Russia is withdrawing her troops from Germany.

U. S. Army reaction to the report, however, was one of skepticism.

A U. S. intelligence officer said he had no reports that would back up the newspaper story. He added that he was in a position to receive such news.

Abendpost said trains carrying Russian troops had been seen traveling eastward at night from the Eisenach area of Thuringia in the Soviet zone.

The story coincided with speculation among diplomats in Washington that the appointment of Soviet Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky to head the Polish army was preparatory to withdrawal of Russian troops from Germany.

Dividend Tax Passed

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—The House of Commons gave final passage tonight to a bill raising the tax on industrial stock dividends from 25 to 30 percent. The vote was 236 to 84.

Australian Couple Flees Soviet's State for Jews

(Seventh in a Series)

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 9 (NYHT).—In 1924, soon after the Bolshevik revolution, the Soviet Union established an autonomous Jewish state in the Far East known as Birobijan. The action was hailed as proof of Communist regard for Jews and the equality of nationalities.

Enthusiastic support for the first Jewish state was forthcoming from all over the world, especially the United States. American Jews donated large quantities of money and material. Between 2000 and 3000 immigrants arrived from abroad to join Soviet Jews in Birobijan.

During the years which, followed, the outside world was permitted to learn little about how the new state was faring.

But at the end of 1947 the veil was lifted. An Australian couple, who had emigrated to Birobijan, managed to get out with the first eyewitness report in several years.

Carlos Melman, a carpenter, attracted by glowing accounts, had pulled up stakes in Australia and emigrated to Birobijan with his wife in 1947. After six weeks they could endure it no longer. They went to Moscow and appealed to the Australian Embassy to help them leave the Soviet Union.

Fortunately they had not given up their citizenship, and the Soviet government was obliged to issue visas permitting them to leave. The Melmans returned to Sydney with less money and with fewer illusions.

They found the following situation in Birobijan:

The Jewish state, with other regions of the Soviet Union, suffered heavily as a result of the purges in the 1930s. Most of the founders and administrators were condemned as Trotskyites.

Up to the German invasion in 1941, the Soviet government invested large sums of money in a development program. The success of the program is indicated by the fact that there are but 50 kilometers of surfaced road in the entire state and mechanical transport is useless a short distance from the main town (also called Birobijan).

The town has a population of about 30,000 and the entire state, with only a few other villages, has about 100,000. Russians heavily outnumbered the Jews, who account for about a quarter of the population of the town and less than that fraction of the state. Most of the Jews are from the Ukraine.

Since the war the Soviet government has revived its interest in Birobijan and immigration from other parts of the Soviet Union has been resumed. A trainload of about 1500 families, the third since the war, arrived in the middle of 1947. A fourth trainload of about 700 families was due to arrive later in the year.

(Other sources put the total number for 18 months up to April, 1948, at 20,000 settlers with an additional 2000 families due from the Ukraine in February, 1949.)

Almost all the immigrants came from the Ukraine, where anti-Semitism, inflamed by the German occupation, continues strong. They reported many Jews were killed in the Ukraine in 1946 and it was not safe for them to leave their homes after nightfall. One of the Soviet solutions of the anti-Semitic problem is to remove Jews from the Ukraine and resettle them in Birobijan.

That is the story of Birobijan as told by the Melmans on the basis of residence and talks with many settlers. Since they left Birobijan there have been reports of still larger removals of Jews from European Russia to the Far East.

(Next—Baltic states are an example of the meaning of the Soviet system.)

Judy's Gubitchev Lost for Words— In English That Is

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Russian Engineer Valentin A. Gubitchev came into court again today on a spy charge and his command of English suddenly deserted him.

Gubitchev, suspended from his United Nations job, is charged with conspiring with Judith Coplon to transmit stolen government documents to the Russians.

Gubitchev and Miss Coplon appeared in court today for the start of their trial, but lengthy arguments by attorneys in the judge's chambers postponed the actual trial at least until Thursday.

In past court appearances, Gubitchev spoke English fluently and understood everything said to him.

But today, when Federal Judge William Bondy asked him if he was ready for trial, Gubitchev answered with a barrage of Russian.

While a Russian-speaking lawyer interpreted, Gubitchev declined to say whether he was ready for trial, said the court had no jurisdiction over him, and claimed diplomatic immunity.

Prague Citizens Get Text of Briggs Talk

Prague, Nov. 9. (AP)—Several hundred Prague citizens read for themselves today the full text of United States Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs' outspoken speech reminding Czechoslovakia, of the role the United States played in her birth and liberation.

More than 200 filed into the offices of the United States Information Service library by mid-afternoon to get copies of the speech that the new envoy delivered when he presented his credentials to Communist President Klement Gottwald yesterday.

The Czechs, who took along several copies for their friends and families, said they had heard about the speech in a Voice of America broadcast. The official Czech news agency did not mention it.

Briggs sharply recalled that Czechoslovakia was founded in the United States during World War I by the late President Thomas C. Masaryk and Eduard Benes, both no longer mentioned by the Communists as national heroes.

Briggs also pointed out that Czechoslovak soil was stained with the blood of American soldiers who helped deliver it from the Nazis in World War II.

The speech put something of a damper on current Communist efforts to attribute to the Russians both the creation and 1945 deliverance of Czechoslovakia.

United States Embassy clerk Samuel Mery, who had been held for three weeks on espionage charges, arrived in Munich, Germany, today, but refused to comment.

He was released yesterday, shortly after Briggs had delivered the speech and conferred with Gottwald.

And He's a Reason

Tito Believes There's Split In Politburo

Belgrade, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito believes there is a split in the ruling Russian politburo over some questions. A Danish interviewer reported today.

One of the questions about which the 12 Kremlin leaders disagree is Russia's harsh policy toward Yugoslavia, Tito was quoted as saying.

Edward Clausen of the Copenhagen newspaper Politiken interviewed Tito. Clausen asked Tito whether his government's frequent references to "some Soviet leaders" in statements on the Tito-Kremlin dispute meant that he believed there were some Russian leaders who disagreed with the Soviet anti-Tito policy. Clausen quoted Tito as replying:

"If you think it over you can see there is a split. There are still people who disappear over there."

Points in Tito's statements, as quoted by Clausen:

1. Tito does not believe that Russia will take armed action against Yugoslavia.

2. Russia will try, but in vain, to create internal unrest in Yugoslavia by border provocations and infiltration of agents.

3. It will take a "very long time," if it is not impossible, to bring about a reconciliation with the Kremlin.

4. Party leaders in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania and Poland get orders from Moscow.

5. The economic blockade of Yugoslavia by Russia and its satellites has created difficulties "but we are progressing very well."

6. The real reason for the Tito-Kremlin fight is that Russia is trying to impose economic and political subjugation on Yugoslavia.

Deputies Row In Austria

Vienna, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—The Austrian Parliament erupted into a free-for-all of shoving and shouting today, shortly after Chancellor Leopold Figl called for a strong Austrian army to protect against rearming neighbor nations.

The melee broke out when Socialist and Communist deputies, shouting "Kill the war criminals," rushed the benches of the Rightests during a Socialist speech describing the horrors of Nazi concentration camps.

The outburst was touched off when a Rightist deputy of the independent new Nazi Party interrupted the Socialist speech to yell, "The Herrengasser was no fun either."

The Herrengasser was the prison in which suspected Nazis were held after the war in 1945. After 10 minutes Figl succeeded in quieting the angry deputies.

Just before the outbreak Figl had told Parliament in a policy statement that Austria must build a strong fighting force because its neighbors "have built powerful armies."

Reds Now 150 Miles East of Chungking

Chungking, Nov. 9. (AP)—Chinese Nationalist troops today recoiled from Red attacks about 150 miles east of Chungking and many were saying this gloomy city's days as a Nationalist capital are short.

Furthermore, Chungking's position was being undermined by a rapid Communist drive into Kweichow province to the south.

(The Nationalists on Formosa officially announced the blockade of Communist ports was being extended to Canton and Amoy and Swatow on the southeast coast.)

The defense ministry admitted the Communists had thrust about 10 miles into Chungking's Szechwan province. Heavy fighting was reported south of Lungtan, 150 miles east of Chungking.

Probably the gravest threat to Chungking was the apparently unchecked Communist drive through Kweichow province.

The defense ministry said the Reds had captured the city of Chenyuan, 115 miles east of Kweiyang, Kweichow's capital. Kweiyang is 200 miles south of Chungking. This was a 10-mile advance in 2 hours.

Fears for Quota

DP Board Reports Act Is Unfair

The present displaced persons law is "overly complicated, unjust, unfair and discriminatory," the Displaced Persons Commission said yesterday in its second semi-annual report to President Truman and Congress.

Urging earliest possible enactment of corrective amendments, the commission warned that efforts to bring to the United States the authorized quota of 205,000 displaced persons before the deadline of June 30, 1950, might fail because of the pattern of restrictions, limitations, preferences and priorities established by the law.

Amendments supported by the commission were passed by the House last June 2, but the Senate failed to take action chiefly as a result of opposition led by Senator Pat McCarran, (D., Nev.) and the bill was recommitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee October 15. The committee was instructed to report a bill by January 25.

The commission said that only 100,493 DP's had been admitted to the United States by October 31, with an additional 5082 persons en route.

It charged the United States had not done its share. This country had taken only 15 percent of the displaced persons resettled by June 30. Other countries had taken a larger number—Israel gave refuge to over 123,000 and England welcomed just under 100,000 plus almost 150,000 members of the Polish army.

There will be at least 180,000 to 200,000 DP's left on June 30, 1950, who could be resettled if the present law is amended. The commission said there was an additional 100,000 to 160,000 people of limited resettlement possibilities. In the former group are about 50,000 Lutherans, and "many thousands of other Protestants will be left homeless in Germany alone, not to speak of Austria or Italy," the commission reported.

To charges that Communist agents and other subversive elements have entered this country disguised as DP's, the commission contended that present security measures were adequate and effective.

30 From U. S. Will Attend India Parley

Thirty educators, newspapermen, business leaders and experts on labor relations from this country will attend an unofficial Indian-American Relations Conference in New Delhi December 12-22, the American Institute of Pacific Relations announced yesterday.

Among those representing the institute will be President Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the University of Virginia, and Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post.

The institute's executive secretary, Clayton Lane, said the conference was intended to explore means of "strengthening all aspects of Indian-American relations, with the expectation that such discussions will promote research and mutual understanding on problems of common interest."

"We believe," Lane said, "that well-organized and documented, but unofficial, contacts and discussions between leaders of opinion in both countries will produce results very helpful not only to scholars, businessmen and other participants, but also to officials in both countries responsible for devising and applying foreign policy."

Holdout Leopard Yields To Food and Water Lure

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 9 (U.P.).—The stubborn leopard of Buffalo's Zoo yielded semi-freedom for food and water today.

The beast jumped down from a lofty perch atop the zoo's lion house after holding out since last Saturday. A trap was sprung and weary keepers, who had kept a vigil since last weekend, relaxed.

Truman to Lead Arlington Ceremonies On 31st Observance of Armistice Day

"God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet
Lest we forget—lest we forget!"
—Kipling.

For the thirty-first time Americans everywhere will pause for a moment Friday to remember that at 11 a. m. on November 11, 1918, a halt was called to hostilities between the Allied forces and the Central Powers.

For the men who were "over there," the memory is far brighter now than for their sons, on whose minds are still sharply etched images of places like Guadalcanal, Tinian, Hiroshima — unknown quantities 31 years ago.

Memory Kept Sharper Here

For residents of Greater Washington, the memory is kept sharper because, at nearby Arlington National Cemetery, the rows upon rows of marble slabs go farther over the rolling Virginia hills with each passing year.

And also because it is the Arlington Amphitheater which each year is a focal point for a Nation's tribute to its "honored dead."

On Friday, President Truman will lead this tribute when, at 11:01 a. m., he will place a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. He will be joined there by American Legion National Commander George N. Craig, who will deliver an Armistice address in the amphitheater in a program starting at 11:15.

Throughout the morning, the wreaths will be laid at the Tomb—from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, from the Daughters of the American Revolution, from the Army and Navy Union, from other patriotic, civic and paternal organizations.

Before Armistice Day actually commences, Clyde A. Lewis, Commander in Chief of the VFW, will deliver a pre-Armistice address over ABC at 4:15, from radio station WMAL.

Tonight at 10 o'clock, American Legion Post No. 42 of the Department of Labor will sponsor a pre-Armistice Day ball at the Wardman Park Hotel, following the National Commander's dinner.

For many Washingtonians, Armistice Day will mean a day off. The day is observed as a legal holiday, and will give thousands of private employes and Federal and District workers a three-day weekend. Banks will be closed, as will public schools in Washington and nearby Virginia. Montgomery and Prince Georges County schools will remain open.

The District Court and the United States Court of Appeals will be closed, but Municipal Court will remain open for continued cases and for lockup.

Most department and retail stores will be open for business, as will most grocery stores, including chains.

Transportation centers expect peak of travel out of town for the weekend to be reached tonight and early Friday.

25 Officials Going Abroad to Negotiate Arms Deals

By The Associated Press

Undersecretary of State Webb announced yesterday that 25 State and Defense Department officials will fly to western Europe today to negotiate with the eight Atlantic Pact countries that are to share one billion dollars in American arms.

Webb told a news conference the officials will go to London, Rome, and the Norwegian and Danish capitals.

An 11-man team will visit London to negotiate with the western union countries in a group—Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and The Netherlands.

This group will be headed by Richard B. Freund, a representative of James Bruce, director of the military assistance program.

Leonard Unger, another of Bruce's assistants, will lead a mission to Rome.

C. Gray Bream will head a group which will go to Oslo and Copenhagen.

In addition to those parties, Webb said five State Department officials have been assigned as special assistants to the American ambassadors in Belgium, Norway, The Netherlands, Denmark, and France, to advise the embassy on military aid matters.

Webb said the twenty-five-man team which will leave today "will conduct further discussions concerning the suitability of proposed mutual defense assistance programs to the specific requirements of recipient countries."

He stressed that American arms will not begin flowing to America's Atlantic Pact allies until separate agreements are signed by each receiving government.

Air Force Picks Tenn. Site for Research Unit

The Air Force announced yesterday its 100-million-dollar air engineering development center will be established at Camp Forrest, Tenn.

The research center will be for the development and evaluation of air weapons. The chosen site is 66 miles southeast of Nashville.

Air Force Secretary Symington said the site is the choice of the Air Force and was approved by President Truman, Defense Secretary Johnson and the Research and Development Board.

It was recommended by Sverdrup & Parcel, Inc., St. Louis consulting engineers, after a 3½-year study of more than 25 possible locations throughout the United States.

The Air Force said the primary needs for the development center are large amounts of water and power. Camp Forrest is within the power network of the Tennessee Valley Authority, it added.

Dr. Angus L. McLean said he was never more pleased with preliminary results of an operation.

The Navy's Pacific war hero, 67 on October 30, was admitted to Wilmer Eye Clinic at the hospital late yesterday. He will stay there eight or nine days, wearing a mask over the eye until it is healed sufficiently to stand bright light.

Dr. McLean reported the admiral also has a cataract on his right eye but it will not be removed at this time—"not until after the Army-Navy football game."

presentation; Capt. Frederick M. Trapnell, commander of the Patuxent, Md., naval air test center; and Capt. John H. Sides, antiaircraft expert, who also testified.

None of the four are near the top of the list of those eligible for promotion, but most if not all of them are expected to be considered. They are not in the very senior group who are deemed to be "passed over" if not chosen, but the board may well dip down into their group in choosing "outstanding" officers. All four have had "outstanding records."

Some Navy officials denied that there was any significance to the appointment of Hill instead of Conolly as head of the selection board. They admitted the latter was "considered" earlier for the post, but not appointed because of conflicting duties in Europe in connection with the Military Aid program.

Meanwhile, the Navy stated that Conolly will be named Superintendent of the Naval Academy if

U. S. Navy Photo
ADM. RICHARD L. CONOLLY
Offered Annapolis post

Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, recently deposed chief of naval operations, decides to accept Conolly's present post. The latter assignment was offered Denfeld when he was replaced as CNO by Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, following the Capitol Hill row in which Denfeld lined up with the Navy critics.

If Denfeld declines the European job and retires, Conolly will continue in that post, the Navy statement declared.

Sherman, the Navy statement said, offered Conolly his choice of two posts—the Naval Academy and Commander, Eastern Sea Frontier—if Denfeld takes the European assignment. He accepted the former. In either case Conolly would revert to three-star admiral, it was said.

No mention was made of an alternate for the Annapolis post if Connolly is continued in his present job. But the statement declared that Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, now Academy head, "is awaiting assignment to new duty."

The selection board which meets Monday may choose 18 unrestricted Line real admirals and four engineering duty or aeronautical engineering duty officers. The "promotion zone" to be considered will include the junior officer in the Navy 1921B year group and all senior to him who were not in last year's zone.

Other members of the board: Vice Admiral Felix B. Stump, Rear Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, Rear Admiral Allan R. McCann, Rear Admiral John H. Cassady, Rear Admiral Harold M. Martin, Rear Admiral Roscoe F. Good, Rear Admiral Charles B. Momsen and Rear Admiral Felix L. Johnson.

Rear Admiral Grover C. Klein, Rear Admiral Homer N. Wallin and Rear Admiral Hugh E. Haven will be alternate members in lieu of Good, Momsen and Johnson when selecting officers designated for engineering duty.

Similarly, Rear Admiral Charles A. Nicholson 2d, Rear Admiral Lucien M. Grant and Rear Admiral Lloyd Harrison will be alternate members in lieu of Good, Momsen and Johnson when selecting officers designated for aeronautical engineering duty.

rescue operations would have been impossible.

Winds of gale force, more than 50 miles an hour, piled up 40-foot seas throughout the area.

The crash was 175 miles north-northeast of Bell's Island Straits and about 500 miles from Argentia, toward which the Tusk is proceeding slowly on the surface.

Preliminary reports said the damaged submarine, the biggest and most modern in the fleet, is in no immediate danger and was expected to reach Argentia Friday afternoon.

The Tusk, skippered by Comdr. R. K. Worthington of Oakmont, Pa., is the same submarine that rescued survivors of the Cochino about two months ago when the Cochino exploded and sank off Hammerfest, Norway.

Order Apparently Unheard

Six crewmen of the Tusk and a civilian were killed in that disaster.

Today's accident came just at the finish of a 24-hour mock battle between surface and submarine units of Duncan's fleet. It was a few minutes after Duncan had radioed orders to all commanders to halt the operation because of the heavy seas.

The Tusk, running submerged, apparently had not received the order.

The operation, which began at noon yesterday in a corridor 100 miles wide and 180 miles long northeast of Newfoundland, was to have ended at 6 o'clock tonight (4 p. m. EST).

Before it was called off, submarines had "sunk" the light carrier Wright, the heavy cruiser Newport News, and five destroyers, while air and surface forces "killed" three submarines.

At New London, Conn., the Navy said the following were aboard the Tusk:

Officers

Commander R. K. Worthington, New London; Lt. Commander G. C. Cook, New London; Lt. (jg) R. H. Watson, Groton, Conn.; Lt. (jg) C. S. Bowcock, jr., New London; Lt. (jg) G. E. Valenty, jr., St. Louis, Mo.; Ensign M. S. Terrass, Los Angeles.

House Unit Warned Of U. S. Cartel Rise

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Rapid growth of big business in the United States and lax enforcement of antitrust laws here threaten the United States with a cartel condition like that of prewar Germany, a House Subcommittee was told yesterday.

The warning was sounded by Philip C. Newman, associate professor of economics at Pennsylvania State College, former economist in the American Military Government in Austria.

"The fate of small business under fascism and the growth of government by private business for its own ends should point a warning to America," Newman declared.

His testimony was given to the House Judiciary Subcommittee investigating monopolies.

Sees 'No Immediate Danger'

"While at the present moment there appear to be no immediate and present danger of private monopolies taking over the Government, there are several disturbing factors in the American scene which mirror what has previously taken place in Germany.

"The first is the laxness of enforcement of antitrust laws on our statute books by our courts, and the second is the still increasing concentration of economic power," Newman declared.

The economics professor pointed out that in Nazi Germany the big business cartellists prospered.

"In most cases," he said, "the monopolists who dominated the great combines and the prewar cartels succeeded in maintaining their power through the entire Nazi regime and benefited financially in so doing.

Scope Widened, He Says

"If the number of cartels declined through rationalization and concentration of organizations, those which remained did not suffer any real diminution of power and each cartel covered a larger area of control.

"Through compulsory cartelization, the entire area of cartel control was greatly expanded. It appeared that economic centralization of authority flourished under political centralization of authority or despotism."

Professor Newman criticized American leniency toward German cartels after the war. He said that during the time General Lucius D. Clay was American military governor in Germany and William H. Draper, jr., was Undersecretary of the Army, "there was no anti-cartel policy."

Stuart Suggests Curb

Harold L. Stuart, president of Halsey, Stuart and Co., Chicago investment bankers, suggested that one form of monopoly curb would be to halt private sales of securities.

O. R. Strackbein, executive secretary of America's Wage Earners' Protective Conference, composed of various AFL unions, warned the subcommittee in a statement placed in the record that tariff reductions may benefit big business and harm little business.

"The economies of mass production," he said, "have enabled the large industries not only to meet foreign competition in our home market (with some exceptions) but to compete successfully in foreign markets with foreign producers. The further reduction of our tariff would not injure these titans, if at all, in any degree comparable to the injury that would be inflicted on the smaller industries that manufacture the principal classes of goods whereof imports would be stimulated."

'Flirtation'

Lewis Hints Of Returning To CIO Fold

By Robert S. Allen

John L. Lewis has a new headline-maker up his sleeve.

He is dropping hints that he is thinking of taking the United Mine Workers back into the CIO fold.

So far, Lewis' "thinking" has been solely of a flirtatious character. In what appear to be carefully selected private conversations, he has let it be known that he believes the miners and steel workers have much in common and that "in unity there is strength."

But beyond such pointed hints, he has made no formal overtures. There has been no personal contact between Lewis and Philip Murray on the matter.

Lewis quit the CIO 10 years ago. Since then, he has been in and out of the AFL twice. His last walkout was in 1948. Shortly after the steel workers struck last month, Lewis wrote AFL President William Green prosing a one-million-dollar fund to aid Murray's union.

Green cold-shouldered the plan. Murray accepted. Nothing came of it, but it has served to create a friendly atmosphere between Lewis and Murray, the first since their split 10 years ago. Previous to that, the latter had been Lewis' right-hand lieutenant for more than 20 years.

CIO chiefs say they have no information on how serious Lewis is on his idea. They are of a split mind what would be done if he makes a concrete proposal. It is conceded a miner-steel worker alliance would have powerful advantages.

On the other hand, Lewis presents a difficult personal problem. In addition to being irascible and domineering, he differs widely with CIO politics, particularly on foreign affairs. He is strongly isolationist.

As one CIO leader expressed it, "The UMW is one thing. Lewis is something else."

Manslaughter Verdict Given in Wife Slaying

John Richard Clements, 42-year-old automobile mechanic, was found guilty of manslaughter in the death of his wife, Mrs. Hazel Clements, 34, yesterday by a jury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Mrs. Clements was shot in their home at 5318 Gallatin st., Rogers Heights, Md., August 1. Clements said he was loading a shotgun in preparation for target shooting when it was fired accidentally.

Lewis Sends Miners Back to Pits for 3 Weeks

was a case of Lewis having been advised by his policy committee delegates what the situation was and how badly they wanted to go back to work."

Lewis is due back in Washington today, and although he has not yet said so, is expected to participate this morning in a joint mediation session with representatives of the operators. The session was called earlier in the week by Cyrus S. Ching, chief Federal conciliator, who during the past several days has conferred separately with Lewis and spokesmen for the industry.

Conciliator Ching said that, with the strike suspended, he would nonetheless continue his efforts to find a solution to the stalemate. It is believed Ching will urge the operators and union to renew direct bargaining negotiations—which collapsed more than a week ago—especially since Lewis himself has mentioned the "remote possibility" of an agreement being reached.

Only comment from the White House was 'That's good" by Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross. Observers felt, however, that the breaking up of the steel strike and the suspension of the coal strike have proved President Truman correct in his firm attitude that neither strike had as yet created a national emergency that required drastic Government action through the Taft-Hartley Act. Mr. Truman has steadfastly maintained he believed the strikes could be resolved through collective bargaining and conciliation.

Lewis' formal statement, among other things, called the coal mine operators and their activities "arrogant . . . brutal . . . oppressive . . . lying . . . deceitful . . . reprehensible . . . sordid . . . mercenary . . ."

Most Miners Appear Happy

Operators generally announced they would reopen their mines as quickly as possible, and some hoped to begin last midnight. Some 13,000 miners were to go back to work in Virginia, and 2000 more in Maryland. Most miners appeared to be happy about returning to the pits, but there were reports from the Pennsylvania fields that some of diggers—while hardly in a mood to oppose the word of Lewis—were not enthusiastic about starting work with the idea of stopping again in three weeks.

Railroads, which had laid off thousands of workers for lack of coal to haul, began recalling their furloughed employes. The Chesapeake & Ohio expects to have most of its 9000 idled workers back on the job in eight days. The Baltimore & Ohio called back 1000 of its 12,000 furloughed workers. The Pennsylvania was planning to recall some of its 15,000 laid-off workers. The Virginian moved to recall 1000 men.

Meanwhile, the Nation's sixth biggest steel producer, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, signed up with the CIO Steelworkers—who struck October 1 to get noncontributory pensions and social insurance—on the Bethlehem peace formula. The formula provides for $100-a-month pensions, financed by the company and Federal social security, and a social insurance program costing 5 cents an hour per worker, to be financed jointly by the company and employes. The company employes 18,000. Bethlehem, Republic, Jones & Laughlin—the second, third, and fourth largest producers—previously signed with the union.

Tax-Exempt Trusts For Charity Slapped

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The tax-exempt charitable trust, already facing congressional scrutiny, has just received another slap as a popular corporate management device.

Secretary of the Navy Matthews, former head of the Knights of Columbus, and spokesman for two well-known Catholic orders have taken steps to disassociate themselves from all Nebraska trusts formed around two world-famous farming operations, even before those operations got under way.

Secretary Matthews declares he terminated his connection with the trusts before attending a single meeting, pointing out he lacked time to discharge a trustee's obligations, that his official duties prevented him from taking on additional duties, and that he was opposed in principle to the operation of large businesses by tax-exempt charitable trusts.

Involved initially in the trusts, in addition to the Secretary were:

1. Three Trappist abbots of Georgia, Utah and New Mexico, and three Benedictine Mothers of Missouri.

2. Former Brig. Gen. Thomas D. Campbell of Hardin, Mont., wheat king of almost legendary fame.

3. Russell Giffen of California, almost as well known in the cotton growing business as Campbell is in wheat.

4. Gordon W. Diesing, 43, Omaha lawyer.

The story began a year ago when Diesing incorporated three charitable foundations, October 11, 1948, under the laws of Nebraska, at Lincoln. They were named the Sacred Heart Foundation, the Sacred Heart Fund, International, and the Sacre Coeur Foundation Fund.

Identical articles of incorporation stated that the foundations were set up to give financial help to Trappist and Benedictine Orders.

Later, three other corporations —so-called business corporations established to support the three foundations—were set up. They were the United States Wheat Corp., incorporated April 13, 1949, the Rancho San Bernardo, Inc., incorporated June 16, 1949, and the Rancho Santa Theresa.

All six were incorporated as nonprofit, charitable enterprises, claiming exemption from Federal corporation income taxes.

The foundations were headed by Diesing and seven trustees. The latter included the former Knights of Columbus leader, Matthews; Venerable Mother M. Dolorosa OSB, primate-general in the United States of the Benedictine Sisters of Perpetual Adoration, at Clyde, Mo.; Veneral Mother M. Carmilita, reverend superior of the Benedictine Convent at Kansas City; Sister M. DeSales; the Rev. James Fox, Abbot of the Abbey of Our Lady of Gethsemene, Trappist, Ky.; the Rev. M. Robert, Abbot of the Abbey of Our Lady of the Holy Ghost, Conyers, Ga.; the Rev. M. Maurice Lans, Abbot of the Abbey of Our Lady of the Holy Trinity, Huntsville, Utah.

Secretary Matthews Resigns

However, Diesing was named president, secretary, treasurer, chairman of the board of trustees, general counsel and resident agent. The articles designted that funds and business of the foundation "shall be managed and controlled exclusively" by the president and treasurer.

Suddenly, on June 15 last, Nebraska Secretary of State Frank Marsh got notification from an attorney withdrawing the names of representatives of the Benedictine Order at Clyde, Mo., from all association in the ventures.

This was followed on July 1 by similar action by the Trappist Monasteries in Kentucky, and on July 6 by the monasteries at Conyers, Ga., and Huntsville, Utah.

On the heels of these withdrawals came the following announcements:

1. That the United States Wheat Corp. had bought the huge, 95,000-acre Campbell Wheat Co. ranch in northeastern Montana for about two million dollars.

2. That the Rancho San Bernardo, Inc., had acquired title to a 35,000-acre cotton ranch in the San Joaquin Valley from a firm headed by Giffen for about $4,800,000.

The Omaha announcements said that Campbell and Giffen would be retained as managers of the two properties.

Later came a brief announcement from the Secretary of the Navy's office in Washington that Matthews, too, had resigned as a trustee in the foundations.

This announcement came coincident to an attack on the Omaha setup on the House floor by Representative Mason (R., Ill.), author of a bill, HR 5064, to impose income taxes on business earnings of certain exempt corporations and organizations.

"Tom Campbell's famous wheat ranch in Montana has been sold to a charitable trust for two million dollars," Mason declared, "and its earnings which heretofore have been subject to a 38 percent corporate income tax now will go tax-free."

Mason added that this method of escaping taxation "is becoming a national racket, while regular business is already paying too much for its own good."

After the church officials had resigned from the board of trustees, Diesing submitted a new list, still bearing the name of Matthews, Secretary of State Marsh's office at Lincoln told The Washington Post. However, he shortly thereafter wrote that the new list was in error and submitted another from which Matthews had been removed.

Churchmen Write Letters

Secretary Matthews said he had agreed to become a director on July 21, under the impression the project was devised to assist a monastery in which he had a close interest. He severed all connections with the enterprises September 16, pointing out that he had misunderstood the beneficiary involved and stating his objections in principle to the whole idea.

The new list includes only Diesing, W. D. Eck of Omaha and Gordon X. Richmond of Orange, Calif., as trustees.

Since their resignations all the churchmen have written Lincoln to make sure their names are definitely and officially removed from the list of trustees.

One letter, signed by "Fr. M. Robert" of Conyers, Ga., stated: "I stipulate that neither my name or the name of the Abbey of Our Lady of the Holy Ghost should be used in any further connection with the Sacred Heart Foundation or any foundation or any corporation of which Mr. Diesing might be named president or chairman of the board."

'Extra-Curricular' Duty Provokes Teachers' Strike

Sharon, Pa., Nov. 9 (AP).—Hickory township high school teachers are on an "extra-curricular" strike today because a male teacher paddled a girl pupil in the halls between classes.

The teachers are not protesting the paddling. They are angry because of disciplinary action meted the teacher who wielded the paddle.

The teacher, Walter MacDonald, was removed as senior class advisor following the incident which, MacDonald admitted, was a "mistake."

In a sympathy movement, his colleagues presented a petition to the school board announcing they will no longer handle extra-curricular activities. These include directing school clubs, assembly programs, class dances and the like.

Own Firm Paid Tucker Profit, Witness Says

Chicago, Nov. 9 (AP).—A Government witness testified today that Preston Tucker made a $15,000 profit in three months from his own corporation on an airplane he bought to haul the first Tucker automobile around the country for display purposes.

The witness, James D. Stearns, former treasurer-controller of the Tucker Corp., testified at the mail fraud and conspiracy trial of Tucker and seven business associates.

Stearns gave this testimony about the plane transaction:

Tucker, using funds he drew from the corporation as advances on his salary, bought a plane from Walgreen Drug Co. for $42,238.

Tucker used the plane for three months. He charged the corporation rental of $5,000 a month.

Then he sold the plane to the corporation for $42,238.

Red Sub Base In Adriatic?

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—A former Foreign Secretary today warned that Russian submarines have penetrated "to the very center of the Mediterranean."

Viscount Templewood—who as Sir Samuel Hoare was Britain's Foreign Secretary in 1935—told the House of Lords Russia is making a submarine base on an Albanian island at the mouth of the Adriatic.

He said there was a "curious apathy" in Britain over defense, despite revelation of an atomic explosion in Russia and Communist domination of China.

While Viscount Templewood was making his observations, the government announced that all its submarines now are equipped with the "schnorkel" breathing tube which permits long-distance underwater operations.

Oil Men Vote Amid Reports Of Disputes

Chicago, Nov. 9 (AP).—The American Petroleum Institute, postponing permanent solution of a subsurface battle, today chose Gen. Baird H. Markham as acting president.

General Markham, an old-time Oklahoma oil man who now is director of the American Petroleum Industries Committee in New York, succeeds President William R. Boyd, jr. Markham will serve until March.

Normally the API presidency is a one-year term with the expectancy that the president, if successful, will succeed himself. The nominating committee's explanation of the short term for Markham was that it did not have sufficient time to complete its work.

However, Boyd let it be known in September that he intended to retire.

That set off a quiet battle, only echoes of which were whispered in convention corridors. Delegates sized up the situation this way:

There has been increasing dissatisfaction—and even factionalism "over the API's decline." Some members felt the public relations program—"the heart of the API"—had been hampered by "false economy" stemming from Boyd.

Other Officers Elected

Simultaneously it was felt that "too much power was being concentrated" in the President's hands. Others felt the President didn't have enough power. Large companies felt one approach was necessary; smaller companies were dissatisfied with "the way API is run of and by the big boys."

Adultery Is Denied By Mrs. Stewart

Sobbing "I loved the baby so," meaning her husband, Mrs. Betty Ann Stewart, 38, yesterday denied she ever committed adultery with the Chicago businessman named as correspondent in the District Court divorce suit.

She admitted accompanying the businessman, identified as James H. Higgins of the Inland Rubber Co., to Room 919, Mayflower Hotel. But her only purpose, she said, was to get her husband a better job.

Her husband, Johnston Fraser Stewart, 39, former law clerk with the Senate Joint Committee on Labor Management Relations, is seeking an absolute divorce on adultery grounds.

When private detectives surprised Higgins and her about the hour of midnight in the Mayflower room, Mrs. Stewart claimed, she was seated at a desk "writing up notes" on her husband's job experience for Higgins' use.

Only Shirt Off, She Says

She denied testimony that Higgins was clad only in an undershirt when detectives burst into the room. He was fully clothed, she said, except for his dress shirt, which he was changing in preparation for leaving to meet two men friends.

Private Detective Perry Bonner had testified that one of the twin beds in the room was disarranged and two towels were on the floor when he, other detectives and Stewart entered the room.

Mrs. Stewart, on the other hand, testified that Bonner said "All the husband wants is grounds for divorce." She added he then "yanked up the bed clothes, threw a towel on the floor and said 'We have it.'"

"I looked at my baby," Mrs. Stewart said through her tears, "and I said I didn't think he wanted a divorce that bad. I walked quietly down the hall. He walked down the hall. He looked at me. I looked at him. I went on home in a taxi. I was just heartsick."

The blond Mrs. Stewart, who lives at the Croydon, 1815 17th st. nw., referred repeatedly to her husband as "Baby." When Stewart's attorney, Harry Ryan, mentioned that this seemed to be her favorite term for him, she smiled broadly.

Somber Expression Changes

"Yes, I called him 'Baby,' like his mother and father did—and he loves it," she added, as the somber expression of Stewart himself changed momentarily into a full smile.

The next second Mrs. Stewart was sobbing almost convulsively.

"There are moments," she burst out, addressing her husband, "when I have loved that baby so much and I hope to God we can reconcile this!"

Besides "baby," Mrs. Stewart admitted to applying another colorful word to her husband. This was in his lawyer's office the morning after the night at the Mayflower June 17, 1948.

In the office, she said, she called her husband a "pimp."

Testifies of Phone Call

That same evening, she went on, her husband telephoned her and wanted to know where Higgins was.

"He (Stewart) said Mr. Higgins ought to give me plenty of money—thousands of dollars," Mrs. Stewart said.

Stewart and she kept seeing each other on into August, she said—taking walks, stopping to sit on church steps, where she said she pleaded with him:

"'Don't use me to extort money. If you want a divorce, go ahead.'"

"Because I realized," she said, "that this was pure extortion."

At one time after their marriage September 23, 1947, Mrs. Stewart maintained, her husband said to her:

"In order for our marriage to continue you will have to keep busy and contact your friends—you can help me."

This referred to getting him a job in New York, she said, so they could be nearer Stewart's New Jersey home.

Her red-fingernailed hands trembling and twisting in her lap to a point where she had to use both hands even to raise a cup of water to her lips, Mrs. Stewart gave out these further details of her nine months or so of marriage to Stewart before the telling night of June 17, 1948:

Out of about 40 weekends, he spent 28 of them away from her at his New Jersey home.

During the nine months, other than paying the $56.25 rent of their apartment and the phone bills, he gave her a total of $161.

She bought her own wedding ring—six months after the marriage.

Mrs. Stewart admitted to a former marriage and divorce but denied she ever concealed the fact from Stewart and that the "None" under the heading "Former Marriages" was because she didn't know what the heading meant.

Tells of Engagement

She also said she had been engaged to a Robert Fowler for about six years before Fowler married in June 1947.

Ryan brought to court an eight-page document, about which he asked Mrs. Stewart:

"Did you not threaten to your husband that you would publish certain information about him which would keep him from ever getting a job as long as he lived if he went on with divorce proceedings?"

Mrs. Stewart denied such a threat. The document was prepared, she said, so that people who saw it "may know about our marriage—things I have done for my husband."

Mother Arrested

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. GERTRUDE HARRIETT PINKERMAN, 25-year-old mother of three children, is free in $2500 bond after being arrested by FBI agents in Kansas City as one of three suspects in the $221,000 jewelry store robbery in Richmond last February

Aged Mr. X's Exotic Checks Excite Police

Washington police have been hard at a game of "X and Nought" ever since a mysterious "Mr. X" floated a series of checks with nought in the bank.

The passer, described as 75 years old and 6 feet tall or about as tall as the stories he tells obliging shopkeepers, usually approaches his victims garbed in the honest blue overalls of a laborer.

He would like to make a purchase of an article that has caught his eye, but would like to bring his daughter back with him for final approval.

'X' Marks the Spot

In the meantime, he would prefer to make a deposit on the article and would the merchant be kind enough to cash his pay check?

Humbly he submits a check with his alleged name typed on as the recipient. The amount is written in with a check writing machine and in one corner is typed "for work as a laborer" or "stevadore" or whatever is his current imaginary occupation.

Asked to indorse it, he is truly humiliated—a simple workman unable to write—but he sure would be glad to sign his mark—"X".

Police Not Marking Time

And as a clincher he pulls out a Social Security card with the same name that appears on the check, which is invariably for $25 to $40 and just as invariably bad.

Local police have received more than a dozen complaints as a result of his operations here. Mr. "X" has left his mark also in North Carolina, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Maryland, according to word received from harassed authorities in those States.

His mark also has been left in police records, police say, and they are seeking a man who served time in District Jail in 1939 for identical operations.

'Got $1000 a Month'

U. S. Argues Case Against Burgman

Final argument began yesterday in the treason trial of Herbert J. Burgman with the prosecution charging that he was more than the reluctant slave of the Nazis as he contends.

Prosecutor Victor C. Woerheide opened the Government's argument by stating that the evidence shows the 53-year-old Minnesota native held a position of responsibility and trust as announcer for the phony undercover radio station DEBUNK in Berlin.

Woerheide said Burgman's broadcasts were uncensored and bore the stamp of approval of Dr. Joseph Goebbels. Burgman, the prosecutor said, originated the idea of fictitious newsflashes of large Allied losses and dissension for the station.

Burgman's salary from the Germans during the 1942-1945 period he is charged with making treasonous broadcasts was equal to $1,000 a month and topped that of the high officials in the radio field in Germany, he charged.

Woerheide said that the purpose of the Burgman plan was to "disrupt," and to "create dissension in America."

Burgman had testified that he agreed to cooperate with the Germans on pain of death if he refused, and that he never meant to betray this country.

In testimony yesterday, two psychiatrists gave conflicting statements as to Burgman's insanity during the period the treason was allegedly committed.

Called by the defense Dr. Ferdinand D. Whitby said that Burgman was insane with "psychopathic personality" but has now recovered. For the prosecution, Dr. Marshall de G. Ruffin said that in his opinion Burgman has always been sane, although he has suffered from a nervous condition not amounting to insanity.

Engel Given 2-10 Years in Love Swindle

Chicago, Nov. 9. (AP)—Sigmund (Sam) Engel, 74-year-old love swindler, was sentenced today to 2 to 10 years in prison for operating an $8700 confidence game at the expense of a red-haired widow.

Judge George M. Fisher overruled a motion for a new trial in criminal court, but granted the aged Lothario a 60-day stay so he can appeal.

Meanwhile the self-styled lover of 1001 women will stay in county jail.

Attorneys for the pint-sized Romeo, who has a 50-year record of swindling women in the United States and Europe, say they will appeal his No. 1 conviction to the Illinois Supreme Court.

Jailed Debtor Notes Birthday

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Bernard J. Smith, who hasn't $2675 and can't earn it in jail, observed his twenty-fourth birthday, today, a forgotten man "left to rot in this dingy cell."

The veteran was jailed 21 months ago because he was unable to pay a $2675 judgment awarded Mrs. Mary L. Mangan, 61, of Rutland, whose son was killed in an automobile accident.

"As long as I'm cooped up in this tiny cell, I'm licked," he said bitterly. "I'll never be able to get the money in jail. If they would just turn me loose I would get out and find a job and pay up."

Last spring, Smith said, his hopes soared when Ralph Fugatt, a 29-year-old Springfield, Mass., veteran held under the same law, was released when a Memphis, Tenn. cotton broker read of his plight and sent $2682 to pay his bills.

"I was certain I would be next," Smith said. "I don't expect anyone to pay my damages.

racing ticker, advertising cards and 14 adding machines.

One of the advertising cards introduced in evidence yesterday contained these statements.

"We Pay With a Smile," "House Is Not Responsible for Writer's Mistake," and "Remember, We Pay Off." No address or telephone numbers were on the cards.

One of the guns seized was an automatic revolver; the other was a .38-caliber police positive special Colt revolver, according to Prosecutor William Hitz.

Registration card for a 1949 Cadillac made out to Lewis also was introduced in evidence.

Jury Hears Slips Read

Hitz read many of the numbers slips to one jury. They contained such marking as "special keepins," "Bo-i eep," "New K-1," "Bunkee-Leads," "Laundry 3/22, 272.50" and "419-50, Saturdays only." Defense counsel objected repeatedly to the introduction of each exhibit.

Hitz was balked by Judge McGuire in his effor' to introduce testimony from Geraci concerning telephone calls the marshal said he answered at Lewis' headquarters during the raid.

Defense counsel objected, contending that such evidence would be hearsay, and inadmissible.

Judge McGuire recessed the court, called counsel from both sides to his chambers, and announced he would reserve his decision about admissability of the telephone conversations until a later date.

For the first time in the trial Judge McGuire expelled four persons from the courtroom. In the middle of Geraci's testimony in the afternoon the judge turned to the four and said, "If these proceedings are funny to you, you'll be in serious trouble with me. You better leave. Marshal, see that these men leave."

The four refused to identify themselves in Courthouse corridors. The courtroom has been crowded with figures familiar in Washington sporting circles since the trial began November 2.

The trial will be resumed Monday at 10 a. m. when defense Counsel Myron G. Enrlich will cross-examine Geraci.

Police, Merchants Move To Curb Fraud Losses

Local bad check artists are finding the going rougher, according to J. P. Stedehouder, president of the Credit Bureau, Inc., of Washington, and credit manager of Lansburg & Brother.

Occurrances involving bad checks now are flashed by police to the Credit Bureau, which in turn relays warnings to hundreds of merchants in the city and suburbs.

As a result of police-merchant cooperation, more "rubber check artists and fraud buyers are going to jail this year in larger numbers than ever before," Stedehouder said.

Virginia Taking No Chances on Empty Coal Pails

Richmond, Va., Nov. 9 (AP).—The Virginia Emergency Fuel Commission today took note of the announcement that striking soft coal miners had been ordered back to work—and then went along with efforts to insure an adequate supply of coal for the State.

Governor Tuck and Highway Commissioner James A. Anderson, chairman of the commission, made it plain they did not want the State to be caught with its coal buckets empty should the miners walk out again on November 30.

Governor Tuck said: "The Emergency Fuel Commission will continue in existence and activated until there are assurances that there is no fuel shortage and no imminent fuel shortage."

The fuel commission today directed that a letter be sent to all local fuel committees pointing out that the "State is practically out of coal of all kinds" and "supplies are down to a dangerous low for the start of what may be a long, hard winter."

Virginia Results

Virginia voters showed a healthy skepticism Tuesday in rejecting the illusory amendment to repeal the poll tax. The 3-to-1 margin by which the Campbell amendment was defeated does not, of course, mean that the poll tax itself is favored by any such proportion. Two factions combined in the decisive vote: first, those residents who believe in the poll tax and resist any attempt to change it, and, second, those persons who oppose the poll tax in principle but saw many ugly loopholes in the Campbell amendment. Short of a blunt proposal to repeal the poll tax without qualifications it is impossible to determine the relative strength of these two factions.

The fact is that the Campbell amendment did not offer such a test. Regardless of the intentions of its sponsors, it was too loose a proposition and permitted of too much possible abuse by the Legislature to offer an honest choice. But the defeat of the Campbell amendment by no means indicates that poll-tax reform is dead, and it is encouraging in this connection to have calls from both Democrats and Republicans for a constitutional convention. A necessary step in this reform is to induce the Legislature to end the dependence on the poll tax as a means of raising school funds. Undoubtedly there is some genuine fear in the Legislature of a Federally initiated poll-tax repeal which would leave Virginia with two sets of voting qualifications—one for Federal and another for State elections. But the way to avoid such an anomaly is for the Legislature to present to the voters a poll-tax repeal amendment which means exactly what it says.

There was no surprise in the election of State Senator John S. Battle as Governor after his victory in the Democratic primary last summer. Locally, however, the election results showed a considerable trend toward independent voting. In Arlington the nonpartisan candidate for the County Board, Robert W. Cox, defeated the incumbent Democrat candidate, Basil DeLashmutt. This reflected the mass popular support for the school-reform movement which indorsed Mr. Cox. In Alexandria, voters showed a preference for nonpartisan elections of the City Council—a preference which, when implemented, probably will mean more participation by Government employes. Both the Arlington and Alexandria results are jolts to the near-monopoly of the old-line Democratic organization, and they indicate an effective vehicle of opposition until a genuine two-party system develops in Virginia.

Flouting The Court

The Supreme Court has administered a well-deserved verbal spanking to the union of locomotive firemen and enginemen which ironically calls itself a brotherhood. Five years ago in the Steele and Tunstall cases the court found this union guilty of violating the Railway Labor Act under which it had been designated exclusive bargaining agent for the craft of firemen. Although it represented Negro as well as white firemen, it excluded the former from membership and entered into contracts with Southern railroads designating colored firemen as "not-promotable," depriving them of seniority rights and driving them gradually out of employment.

"We think," said Mr. Chief Justice Stone for a unanimous court in the Steele case, "that the Railway Labor Act imposes upon the statutory representative of a craft at least as exacting a duty to protect equally the interests of the members of the craft as the Constitution imposes upon a legislature to give equal protection to the interests of those for whom it legislates." It is shocking to realize that this clear command has been flagrantly ignored by the brotherhood. Negro firemen were forced to seek, and obtained, an injunction in the Federal District Court for the District of Columbia against continuance of the discrimination. The brotherhood, in an obvious resort to dilatory tactics, countered with a plea, not on the merits, but on the ground that venue was improperly laid here, and the Court of Appeals ordered the case transferred to Ohio.

It was the narrow question of venue that the Supreme Court decided on Monday. It reversed the Court of Appeals and not only reinstated the order of the District Court but decreed that "the mandate go down forthwith." Thus any further discrimination on the part of the brotherhood will subject it to penalties for contempt of court. It is a pity that penalties cannot be administered for its past contumacy. Mr. Justice Jackson was quite justified in castigating the brotherhood as guilty of "a continuing and willful disregard of rights which this court in unmistakable terms has said must be accorded to Negro firemen." We hope that the lesson is now learned.

Back To Work

Speculation is rife as to the reason that coal miners have been ordered back to work for a brief period. The only explanation for the strike truce order vouchsafed by John L. Lewis is that the union wishes to make "another contribution of great magnitude to enhance the remote possibility of agreement (on a new contract) being reached." However, he did not end his statement on this note. He went on to warn the public to seize the opportunity thus afforded to acquire coal supplies to tide them over a further suspension period "in the event that the contemptuous arrogance of the coal operators remains undiminished." By stressing his conviction that further negotiations between the UMW and the operators are virtually certain to lead nowhere, Mr. Lewis makes it all the harder to fathom the motives behind his latest surprise move.

One suggestion is that he hopes to stave off Government intervention by calling back the miners. But if he really despairs of reaching a settlement before the truce ends, Government intervention to avert another walkout of the miners will be essential. Of course, Mr. Lewis may be anxious to spur the Government into invoking the Taft-Hartley Act after public resentment of the hardships inflicted by the prolonged coal strike has been softened by a back-to-work order. There is also a possibility that the return to work might clear the way for the creation of a fact-finding board outside the scope of the Taft-Hartley Act like that set up for the steel industry, although Mr. Lewis is reportedly opposed to Government fact-finding boards of this sort and would be within his legal rights in refusing to assent to any such proposal.

We take no stock at all in Mr. Lewis' alleged desire to relieve the "inconvenience" caused the public by the coal strike. For he has always shown a ruthless disregard for the effect of his actions on the welfare of the country at large. The plain fact of the matter is that there are limits to the staying powers of the miners themselves. A time comes when even the strongest of labor leaders dare not risk alienating devoted followers by condemning them to prolonged periods of idleness—idleness which exhausts their savings and forces them to subsist precariously on charity or on credits, often extended by company-owned stores.

In some of the mine fields such a stage seems already to have arrived. For example, according to an eyewitness account published in the Louisville Courier Journal of October 30, schoolchildren in eastern Kentucky are actually hungry, and miners are willing to sell their household furniture for a song in order to buy bare necessities. The article also says that "there are scattered signs that some of the miners, at least, are beginning to wonder if what they're striking for is worth what they're having to go through." We suspect that a great many miners are beginning to have such doubts and that Mr. Lewis is aware of the growing disaffection. In other words, the most plausible explanation of the back-to-work order is that it is a move to avert the danger of a collapse of the strike brought about by the sheer misery of the strikers.

Two weeks or a bit more of full time work, plus overtime pay, will put money in the pockets of destitute miners and enable Mr. Lewis to mark time a little longer. But unless he experiences a change of heart, the chances of a negotiated settlement of the mine dispute appears to be nil.

Blind Flying

With Washington and the country still stunned by the horror of last week's air collision, now comes the disclosure that a similar tragedy near the National Airport was averted by a margin of only 50 feet. The offender in this case was a Bolling Field B-25 bomber practicing blind flying, and the near-victim, frighteningly, was yet another Eastern Air Lines transport. This narrow escape adds an exclamation point to the long-overdue action of the Civil Aeronautics Administration in assuming directional control of military as well as civilian flights. More than this, it emphasizes the urgent necessity for moving all military flights from Bolling Air Force Base and the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

It is outrageous that military planes should be practicing instrument flying near crowded cities and in the traffic lanes used by civilian air liners. Even though such test flights from Bolling Field have been suspended, the conflicting traffic patterns of three separate airports just across the Potomac from each other pose a continuing menace. The air over Washington is simply not commodious enough for both tactical military aircraft and civilian transports, and in this case the safety of civilian passengers must be considered paramount.

Sherman's Decision

The only valid excuse for not court-martialing Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin was the wish to tone down the controversy within the Navy. In this circumstance the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Sherman, probably showed wisdom in confining the punishment of the dissident captain to a strong reprimand and transfer to the Pacific Coast. He may have been influenced by the feeling that Captain Crommelin was acting as a spokesman for higher-ups in his intemperate public attack on unification and his indefensible release of a confidential memorandum.

Captain Crommelin is a senior officer in the Navy. Despite his fine earlier record, the willful disregard he showed for regulations was enough to land a lesser figure in the brig. His breach of the loyalty to superior authority required in a military career was no less serious merely because his motives were those of a crusader. Certainly the current talk that Captain Crommelin may soon come up for promotion ought to be squelched until he demonstrates that he understands the meaning and responsibility of military discipline.

The healing in the Navy depends, however, as much upon the attitude of Admiral Denfeld as upon the conduct of Admiral Sherman. Admiral Denfeld has been hoisted to leadership of the cabal, and, if he spurns the role which his friends think is innately distasteful to him, he can help bury the hatchet in the common interest.

Rokossovsky

It had not seemed that there was any remaining indignity that the leaders of Soviet Russia could perpetrate against the people of Poland. With their usual resourcefulness in such matters, however, the men in the Kremlin have managed to find one. They have ordered the appointment of Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky of the Red army as Defense Minister of Poland, and have announced that he has been relieved of his military duties for this purpose.

The indignity, of course, does not lie in the fact that Marshal Rokossovsky is the hand-picked instrument of the Kremlin. As an instrument he could not possibly be more obedient to the will of the Russian leaders than the rest of the present Polish government. Moreover, he is Polish by birth and well acquainted with the country and its language. Where the indignity lies is in the fact that Rokossovsky was the commander of the Russian troops on the Vistula when, in response to the exhortations of the Soviet radio which announced that deliverance was at hand, the Polish underground rose in open insurrection against the Nazis in Warsaw. Throughout the insurrection Marshal Rokossovsky's army lay immobilized outside the gates of Warsaw. Not a Russian shot was fired in aid of the insurrectionaries, not a Russian plane took to the skies to interfere with the fearful vengeance wrought upon the capital by the Luftwaffe.

It is probable nevertheless that Marshal Rokossovsky's appointment is part of a much larger scheme of Soviet power, involving not only Poland but all the other Baltic states and Eastern Germany. It may be part of the preparation for the ultimate absorption and integration of the whole of Europe east of the Elbe into the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. When the time for that has come, we shall be sure to find the Red army leaders and the M. V. D. ready for their work.

Election Returns

November 8, 1949, appears to have been, with some exceptions, a great day for the Democrats. They won a Senate seat in New York—a victory which they are entitled to take as a majority indorsement of President Truman's Fair Deal. Governor Lehman won by defending the Fair Deal as a program conducive to the general welfare; Senator Dulles lost by attacking it as statism. In mayoralty contests, the Democrats not only held New York City against combined Republican, Liberal and Fusion opposition but captured such traditional Republican strongholds in the upper part of the State as Syracuse and Binghamton, although losing in Buffalo. They won also in Cleveland, in Pittsburgh, in Louisville, and in Philadelphia, where they upset an entrenched Republican machine by electing four key city officials.

The Republicans must look for comfort mainly to New Jersey, where the voters not only gave them the governorship but apparently administered the coup de grace to the Hague hegemony even over Hudson County. The Socialists managed, although with rather more difficulty than in the past, to retain their control of Bridgeport and Norwalk, Conn. Perhaps the most interesting of the mayoralty results was in Boston, where Mayor Curley, who had for so long held on to the office, in and out of prison, was supplanted by City Clerk John B. Hynes, also a Democrat.

It is not easy to discern any common denominator in these elections. Only the New York State result had any national implications or can be said to have been determined on the basis of national issues. Local factors were the determinants in the other local contests. The most that can safely be said in the way of generalization is that the voters showed a hostility to machines that had been revealed as corrupt—in Philadelphia, Boston and New Jersey, for example—and a refusal to be frightened by charges of machine domination and corruption in situations where the incumbent administrations had seemed to serve them reasonably well—as in New York City, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Indeed, perhaps the outstanding lesson of the election was that the voters were unmoved by horrendous forecasts and bugbear labels.

FUGUE

What power is in the wind,
What power and what grace!
The unseen wind that lifts the wave
And molds the mountain's face.
Wonderful and warm,
In waterfalls of light,
How the high stone places stand
In unconfronted might.

The year is all year newy
The morning rose with pride,
Now at dusk the stars come forth
With a kingly stride;
With a kingly steadfastness—
Heart, there is no will
Like the bold advance of trees
Up a bright hill.

New Nazism

A resident of Washington, I arrived in this city two days ago and I wish to inform you about something I saw. Walking into the city from the main railway station, I suddenly noticed some big posters at the outside walls of the station which, at the first glance, I thought I had seen 25 years ago. Yes, there it was, quite unmistakably! The same size, the same typesetting, the same language:

"National German Union
Big Patriotic Rally in the
Circus Krone, October 23
Speaker: Feitenhausel

Down with the Bolshevist expulsers. We request equal rights for the bombed-out and expelees. We request termination of defamation of the Germany army. We request equal rights for all former members of the NSDAP (Nazi Party)."

According to the November 4 Sueddenstsche Zeitung the Munich population, smelling a rat, occupied the Circus Krone—Hitler's old assembly center—before the Feitenhausel men could get in and thus prevented the meeting of October 23 from taking place. Feitenhausel, infuriated, is now reported to be staging his propaganda in northern Germany. But he is also said to have assembled a Saalschute (SA) of 2000 men and to be trying to make a comeback in Bavaria.

As "Feitenhausel" sounds a bit like "Schickelgruber" and since the movement still is unimpressive, people still shrug their shoulders when talking about it. But the story shows what we have to expect should we ever move out from here and should we be unable to solve the problems of the about eight million expelees who evidently would be but too happy to boom the SS of Feitenhauselism.

Greek Rebels

The Communists have been dealt a devastating blow in Greece, but there is little foundation for belief that the Soviet threat of further danger to Greek independence is over.

One of the more hateful Communist acts is the episode involving 25,000 Greek children. These defenseless youngsters were kidnapped from their homes during the Red attacks.

The acts have been protested vehemently by the governments of Greece, the United States and Great Britain. The International Red Cross resolved that the children be returned. A vote in the U. N. General Assembly last year recommended they be returned to Greece "whenever the parents or close relatives ask it."

Excepting Tito's land, the satellites have either ignored the demands or refused them outright. There can be little hope in solving this impasse without forceful action by all of the United Nations countries.

Another problem is the arms question. Benjamin V. Cohen, United States delegate to the United Nations, told the Political Committee that at least 11,500 Greek rebels, which have beset the Greek government since 1945, have fled into Albania and Bulgaria and may be still a further menace to the peace.

The American Government asked the United Nations to impose an immediate arms embargo against Albania and Bulgaria until both countries have been cleared of aiding Greek guerillas. This move was given the wholehearted support of Britain, Australia and China. But there have been no tangible moves to the U. N., with backing of the Western powers, to seal the Bulgarian and Albanian borders.

Speculation is rife that the bandit groups, possibly reinforced by armed regulars, will be turned loose against Yugoslavia in the same manner that they were thrown against Greece. Infiltration of Yugoslavia and an attempt to overthrow Marshal Tito's government there, will no doubt eventually lead to renewed disturbances by iron curtain fifth columnists in Greece.

The Western powers have shown in the United Nations that vigilant action can make a deep mark on world opinion. But world opinion, while beneficial, can not tie the hands of power-hungry men in politburos fashioned after the master cominform politboro in the Kremlin. Teeth must be added to any blueprint drawn up as a satisfactory solution to the Balkan problem.

Sesqui Concessions

There have been recent reports about $25,000 offers and similar things regarding the concessions for various commercial enterprises at the Freedom Fair. Fortunately, such offers were refused—thus far, since the Sesqui Commission has not as yet set up any operational procedure for handling concessions.

Before any regulations are established it might be advisable for the people responsible for such things to remember that perhaps it would be a nice thing if this fair, which supposedly is meant to glorify our way of life, of free and independent enterprise, would handle what commercial concessions there will be in a manner that gives an equal chance to compete to the small business or tradesman.

The best way to accomplish this and at the same assure maximum revenue from any concessions granted would be to fix a certain amount of the revenue taken in any concession, to be paid to the commission as rental. In this manner actual technical qualifications rather than the size of a potential concessionaire's bank account will determine the choice.

Jews In Iraq

The Iraq Minister and Charge d'Affaires in his letter published October 28, dealing with the persecution of Jews in Iraq, makes a blanket denial of the accusations against the government of Iraq and through this denial hopes to dispel the fears and apprehensions of thousands of well-meaning people over the fate of the 150,000 Jews in Iraq.

Mr. Baker failed to point out in his letter two salient facts about the present situation in Iraq which make it simple for him to make his denial: (1) the whole of Iraq is still under martial law, with the country divided into four military areas and strictly controlled by the army; (2) a strict military censorship prevails on news into and out of Iraq, and there has not been a single neutral correspondent in the country for many months.

A New York Times correspondent recently gave a vivid and accurate description of the position of the Jews in Iraq today when he began his report, "Oppression of Jews in Iraq is widespread. There are no public demonstrations; all is done quietly and subtly by government pressure . . ."

Such reports have been substantially confirmed by documentation received recently, giving the names of Jews who have been tried and sentenced by military courts. These names run into the hundreds. Among them are such accusations:

"While searching their home, the police found a piece of paper with a Hebrew quotation from the Bible, which was considered a Zionist paper."

"Was at Rosa Abraham's house during a search."

"His Moslem teacher stated he was cursing the Iraqi army."

The sentences for these alleged crimes ranged from 2 years hard labor to 5 years hard labor and fines ranging from 500 dinars to 5000 dinars. Lest anyone continue the accusation that this is Zionist-inspired propaganda, all of these reports were taken from the Baghdad newspapers, Al Sha'ab and Liva el Istiklal, and from the Baghdad radio.

The roll of those Jews who suffer from the sin that they are Jews grows with each day's passing. Since May 15, 1948, and thereafter, as the Iraqi leaders began to understand the extent of their military defeat in Israel, the persecution of Jews on trumped-up charges has increased and been intensified. Hundreds of Jewish employes have been thrown out of their government positions and their economic life disrupted. Searches of Jewish homes have been widespread and those arrested tortured to wring from them confessions that they are Zionists or associated with Zionism. All except the very elemental government services have been denied Jews and every effort made to stifle Jewish cultural, financial and educational progress.

The Jews of Iraq have been living in Iraq for over 2500 years, long before the Arab population ever existed. They have continued their loyal association with the country and have made notable contributions to the country's political, social and economic progress. The Jewish wealth of Iraq has been estimated at somewhere around 250 million dollars, a tantalizing prize for the government of Iraq, which today finds itself in serious economic difficulties. An appraisal of how well their work has been done can be seen in these facts: before World War II Jewish citizens of Iraq had a 90 percent interest in the total import business of the country, a 90 per cent interest in building contracts, and a 10 per cent interest in the export trade. Following May 15, 1948, their interest in imports has dropped to 20 percent, they have no building contracts at all, and they have only a 2 per cent interest in exports.

It is an obvious gambit these days to speak of "subversive movements" in very general terms as a justification for acts of suppression of civil rights and human freedoms. Common decency demands that all who are accused of any charge should be given a fair and equitable trial. But even more than that, no citizen of a state should be subject to discrimination and oppression solely on the basis of his race or religion. This runs contrary to the basic principles of the Charter of the United Nations, of which Iraq is a signatory.

A neutral investigation by disinterested observers of the position of the Jews in Iraq today would make known the true facts and situation.

Regimented Retirement

By Malvina Lindsay

Idleness Menace

LIFE BEGINS at 65, believe many of those who are looking forward to that age with new expectation as a result of recent strike settlements. Time to live at last . . . no hurry, no prodding, no orders. . . . Nothing to do but what fancy urges . . . Enough security at least to keep the wolf from the door.

But frequently it doesn't work out that way. Time becomes a gray, heavy-footed ogre. Trivialities bore, idleness frustrates. The active world pushes unheedingly by. The pension check grows less elastic.

In fact, unless there is definite work, a hobby, creative interests, or some outlet to make the person feel useful or important, he is likely to find life either ending or running into the blind alley of physical or mental illness.

Much present insanity among the elderly is due to idleness, Dr. Howard A. Rusk of the department of rehabilitation and physical medicine of New York University, recently declared. And how idleness and a sense of being cut off from participation in the world contribute to chronic illness of the elderly is emphasized by Dr. John A. Schindler of Monroe, Wis., whose research is psychosomatic illness has recently aroused wide interest. On a University of Chicago Round Table Sunday, Dr. Schindler told how such illness was increasing among older people, chiefly because of "unhappiness." Being usefully employed, he pointed out, is one great stimulus to happiness.

PEOPLE should work as long as they are productive, say students of the retirement problem. Or if there is compulsory retirement it should be by psysiological rather than calendar age. Economists say that unless something is done to keep those past 65—or even 45—more productive, the ratio of the idle to the workers will be too great. There are now about 10½ million in the past-65 class. By 1975, it is estimated, there will be about twice that many.

Yet these warnings do not figure in pension or retirement systems. There men are treated as machines in assessing their depreciation. The same is true in the hiring of workers. An arbitrary age—45 or even 40 for men, often less for women—is set.

Strangely, we cry out on all sides about regimentation of people and the rights of the individual, while in industry man is treated as an automaton when it comes to "installing" him or "scrapping" him. There is great demand for laws prohibiting employers from discriminating because of race or religion, but a bill introduced in Congress to prohibit age discrimination in employment has not even been taken seriously.

True, there is rising interest in doing something about all this. But can it ever catch up with the "pensions at 65" slogan? Can it outdistance the old people's lobby now calling for pensions at 60?

MANY committees, including one in the New York Legislature, have made studies of the work efficiency of people past 45 and even 65. Results show that the older workers have their special values—apart from the virtues of middle-aged and younger workers—that they are less prone to accidents and absenteeism, and that cantankerousness in employes is not a matter of age, but of physical or mental health.

In dealing with great numbers of employes it is easier and less expensive to make sweeping, arbitrary rules than to apply individual understanding. It is especially easier in strike negotiations. And it is true that in certain fields of labor the worker does have to be retired earlier. Also management may feel it needs means to get rid of deadwood help—though here again every firm has deadwood of all ages.

But danger lies in the growing, unquestioned acceptance of the principle that men and women must be scrapped at an arbitrary calendar age.

Pensions apparently are here to stay and a truly democratic American pension plan needs to be developed. It will have to be one that sees a worker as something more than "a man past 65."

'Adequate' Defense

I note that the Alsop brothers, Secretary Louis Johnson, et al, are still playing and replaying that familiar record known as adequate national defense, meaning that my side must continually exceed your side in the production of more and more effectual weapons for greater mass murder and greater and greater destruction.

May I rise to ask a question? Under the competitive armament race, which has been carried on since history began, when does this method of "defense" become "adequate" and how long does it remain adequate? THERESA H. RUSSEL.

Junketing Congress

By Marquis Childs

Merrymakers Give U. S. A Black Eye

FRANKFORT, Germany.—Junket members of Congress are swarming over Europe inspecting this and studying that. Most of them are seriously interested in what is happening in Europe and how American aid is being used.

Childs

But others are not, quite definitely not. Too often they behave like college freshmen after a football victory, and that is really being rather unfair to college freshmen.

The other day I heard a detailed account of the behavior of one group of junketing Congressmen which was a perfect example of how not to behave when you are an official visitor in a foreign country. These men violated every rule of Emily Post and some that Mrs. Post didn't think it necessary to include in her book.

En route to the capital of the country, the visiting Congressmen were bewitched by the scenic beauties of a town they passed through. A conspicuous feature of the scenery was two pretty blonde girls on the station platform.

As a result, they arrived 24 hours late with no apology whatsoever. This meant that a series of appointments made for them with cabinet ministers had to be canceled and made over again. The fact that this took a great deal of the time and energy of American officials meant nothing or less than nothing to the visitors.

In fact, their attitude to members of the embassy and ECA staff was that these Americans were probably undeserving loafers who had somehow managed to get themselves into soft berths and were now enjoying a lazy and lascivious life in wicked Europe. The idea is to get service out of 'em, see. What do we pay them for, anyway?

THE AMBASSADOR had arranged a small cocktail party at which the visiting Congressmen were to meet the cabinet member most concerned with the problem that was their specialty and with his experts. They arrived nearly an hour late. They had already had a great many cocktails.

They made it plain they weren't very interested in talking to the cabinet minister or anyone else who might burden them with serious information. This chore they left to the harassed and unhappy staff director whom they had brought with them.

What they wanted was for the ambassador to find somehow the telephone number of those two blondes back in that other town. And if he couldn't do that, then why weren't there some good-looking gals on tap here in the capital? What kind of a place was this, anyway?

The cabinet minister had arranged a small dinner for them. They at first said they wouldn't go. "What do we want to sit around and talk to those old birds for?" After some earnest pleading, the ambassador finally persuaded them that it would be slightly insulting not to go. They went, but they left early and noisily.

When the ambassador put them on the train the next day, having personally administered various hangover remedies, he gave a sigh of relief and started in to repair the damage they had done. Discreet apologies could be made to the cabinet minister and his experts who had been prepared to supply masses of facts and figures on the problem officially under study by the junketeers.

A TRAVELING member of Congress may feel that he is answerable only to the sovereign voter back in his District or his State. And isn't he entitled to a little fun when he gets out of the country where nobody knows him, anyway?

What he does not seem to realize is that in Europe he is not just the Congressman from the umpty-ump district of the great State of whatever it may be. He is a representative of the United States and his conduct reflects in one way or another on his country.

Serious members of Senate and House who come without too many prejudices and preconvictions because they really want to get the facts suffer from the bad behavoir of a few. Probably the majority of traveling Congressmen try to look seriously at what they come to Europe to see. A Senate subcommittee has been earnestly studying the system of cooperative housing in Scandinavia.

But there should be some way for Congress to restrain or discipline the junketeers who go along merely for the ride and all the hey-nonny-nonny they can get in along the way. These careless merrymakers give Congress and for that matter the Government of the United States a black eye wherever they go. They are a fearful burden on overworked American officials in Europe, most of whom seem to be trying to do as good a job as possible. While it would cost the taxpayer a little more, it might be worth it to pay the way of wives of junketing Congressmen. The little woman might exercise some useful restraint and see to it that more work was done.

P-38 Pilot Gave No Hint of Trouble, Tower Man Says

This testimony tended to show that the P-38's radio was in operation, a point of much debate to date, until a few minutes before the wreck.

"I gave Bolivia 927 runway No. 3, but received no acknowledgement. I asked him if he requested landing instructions. He said yes . . . I gave him clearance again.

"In the meantime, Eastern 537 was about a mile or a mile and a half out and Mr. Union advised me it appeared Bolivia was east of the Alexandria Masonic Temple at about 4000 feet.

"I advised him (the P-38) to make a 360 (degree turn) to the left, but received no acknowledgment or compliance from Bolivia.

"I instructed Bolivia to turn left again. There was no acknowledgement.

Then on the "Final"

"I immediately turned to Eastern 537, who was then on the "final" (coming in for a landing) about a mile out.

"I told him to turn left, because the P-38 was above and behind. He complied immediately. Just as he started his left turn the collision occurred. I saw the impact."

Emory T. Nunneley, jr., general counsel for CAB, and Russell A. Potter, chief of the CAB Hearing Section, pressed him for more details.

"Did anything in that transmission indicate an emergency of any kind with respect to the P-38?"

"No sir," Tigner replied.

Normal and Ordinary

"A perfectly normal and ordinary request for landing instructions?"

"Yes."

"You gave him landing instructions?"

"Clearance to enter the traffic pattern," Tigner said.

The controller became more specific a few minutes later. He said he told Bridoux to "make a 360 to the left, follow Eastern as No. 2," although the quotation was not "verbatim."

When it became apparent Bridoux was not going to obey, Nunneley asked, why didn't Tigner signal with his field lights?

Tigner said he was afraid to use the emergency lights, because it might confuse both planes.

Tigner said he had reason to believe that Bridoux "was reading (receiving) me," after the request for landing instructions.

He was asked if it was "physically possible to engage in simultaneous transmission," whereby both planes—although on different frequencies—could hear his instructions.

Tigner said it was possible, but he never recalled having used such a method.

"Would it seem desirable to use it on that day?" he was asked.

"Yes," Tigner replied, but said he understood policy at the airport was against it.

Theoretically Possible

"Is it theoretically possible that you were on the wrong frequency?"

"Yes," Tigner replied in a low voice, which he seldom raised throughout the proceedings.

He was queried closely about his duties. Chrisp asked what he considered his responsibility.

To this, Tigner said "to safely expedite the flow of traffic."

"If you give instructions to a pilot, do you assume responsibility with respect to the pilot?"

"It is the pilot's responsibility then," Tigner answered.

Union was the last witness, and he largely upheld Tigner's testimony as the hearing was recessed until 9:30 a. m. today.

Union said he was "quite sure" that Tigner identified the P-38 in his radio instructions to turn left, "which he repeated two or three times."

When Tigner's last-minute orders were unavailing, Union said that "the Eastern plane responded immediately."

Started to Turn

"It first applied power, leveled off and started to turn.

"Then the P-38 hit it . . . from above and slightly to the right, approximately at the door.

"The DC-4 broke in two at the point of contact, and the forward end fell into a straight steep dive. The tail assembly fluttered to the ground. The P-38 turned off and dove into the water."

Major German Pol, a Bolivian Air Force officer and close friend of the P-38 pilot, who witnessed the crash, was on the stand during the morning.

He said Bridoux had told him of having 80 hours flying time in P-38s. Bridoux's lifetime flying total was 4200 flying hours, Pol testified.

The major's testimony on details of the crash differed in several respects from that of other witnesses.

He went to National Airport with Bridoux and Paul Aubin, president of the Universal Air and Marine Supply Co., here with whom he was negotiating purchase of the P-38 for his government.

"The Bolivian government has consistently taken the position that the plane is still the property of Universal and never became the property of the Bolivian government," Major Pol said.

Tested 3 Times Previously

He described how Bridoux had tested the plane on three different occasions before the day of the fatal crash.

Among needed repairs were a bad battery, throttles off center, smoke coming from the radio, a leak in the hydraulic system of the booster of the left wing aileron and unregulated brakes, Pol said.

He was assured these repairs had been made, Major Pol said, and Bridoux seemed satisfied with the performance of the plane before he took it up November 1 on his first test flight.

That day he and Aubin got in a station wagon at the hangar when Bridoux took off, Major Pol testified.

"Mr. Aubin told the driver to turn his radio on with the tower so that we would hear the instructions given to the P-38."

The driver said it was on, as evidenced by some static, Major Pol added.

Heard No Instructions

"From this moment until the accident happened we didn't hear any instructions from the tower to the P-38," said Pol.

He described a similar experience in the same vehicle previously, when he was able to hear between the tower and aircraft.

When the planes crashed, "I heard on the radio of the station wagon a very loud voice giving the alarm of the accident and giving the location where the planes fell," he added.

Tower men at Bolling Air Force Base across the Potomac have said they heard on their radio receivers instructions for Bridoux to circle National Airport.

At the crucial moment, Major Pol said the DC-4 "pulled up and to the left and came into the path of the P-38."

He first estimated it was a 45-degree turn, but later said the big plane probably deviated about 30 degrees from it scourse. It also "gained altitude," he testified.

Told to Watch P-38

A hint that tower officials may have known something about the condition of the P-38 preceded Major Pol's testimony. Tigner said he wasn't sure, but his fellow worker may have also mentioned it was "an old plane."

After Mapor Pol finished his testimony, CAB Meteorologist George French took the stand and described weather conditions at the time of the collision.

There was an overcast at 6500 feet, with "scattered clouds" at 3500 feet, he said. Visibiiity was 15 miles, and no smoke or haze or "other limiting factors existed below 2000 feet," he testified.

George Roerig, assistant to the vice president of operations for Eastern Air Lines, verified the flight plan filed by the crew of the DC-4 at New York on November 1.

He said the "very high frequency" radio was checked in at LaGuardia Airport at 10:17 a. m. as all right.

The DC-4 gave a position report when it reached Beltsville, Md., and announced it was changing to "tower frequencies" for a landing here, Roerig said.

He quoted a statement by Capt. S. B. Parkinson, who flew the plane from Boston to New York the same day, that no malfunctioning had been detected.

"In fact, he remarked to Captain Ray (George Ray, pilot of the DC-4) on leaving the ship that it was a good one."

Roerig said Ray had logged 9033 hours in the air. Of these, 888 were in a DC-4. His co-pilot, Charles R. Hazlewood, has logged a total of 4395 hours, 26 of them in DC-4, Roering testified.

Ray has been certified to operate in and out of National Airport since 1942, he added.

One of the most eagerly awaited documents in the hearing, which promises to run for several days with 42 more witnesses scheduled to appear, is the transcript of a 90-minute interview between Bridoux and CAB officials on Tuesday.

After yesterday's session, Larry Cates, Washington representative of the Air Line Pilots Association, said "all this testimony about 'instructions' from control towers is greatly at variance from the position formerly taken by CAA that it acts only in an 'advisory' capacity."

Right Pass Regulation

He said his group also intends "to find out why the P-38 was told to make a left turn behind the DC-4 when the Civil Air Regulations specify that an overtaking airplane shall pass on the right."

Besides Chrisp and Jones, the board consists of W. K. Andrews, director of CAB's Bureau of Safety Investigation: E. N. Townsend, chief of the CAB's Accident Investigation Division, and Joseph Fluet, chief of CAB Region I, New York City.

CAA Not Yet Handling All Military Flights

The Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA) has not actually taken over control of good weather flights by Air Force and Navy planes, a CAA spokesman said last night.

The two services announced jointly Tuesday night that the CAA would assume control of all flights by military planes beginning yesterday. The civilian agency already is responsible for control of Air Force and Navy craft during bad weather.

Ben Stern, information director for the CAA, said conversations with the two armed services are continuing. He said it is the hope that CAA will shortly be able to assume responsibility for all military flights.

Stern told a reporter that after the Air Force and the Navy made their announcement Tuesday night "they found out that there were a lot of technical problems involved which will take time to work out."

He said it is not now possible to estimate when the move will be made.

Lane Wants D. C. to Use Friendship Airport

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 9 (AP).—Governor Lane wants to talk with President Truman about the possibility of having Baltimore's Friendship International Airport designated a co-terminal with the Washington National Airport.

There has been much discussion recently about crowded conditions at the Washington airport. There have been proposals that an additional airport be constructed near Washington. Baltimore's new airport is in Anne Arundel County.

The Governor's office disclosed today that Lane had sent a telegram to Mr. Truman saying construction of an additional civilian field near Washington would involve "a very substantial and unnecessary expense," and urging "full consideration" of the Friendship airport as co-terminal rather than the construction of an additional civilian field.

Must Rebuild, Stassen Warns Republicans

By The Associated Press

Harold E. Stassen warned the Republican Party yesterday that it must "rebuild" to serve the people if it is to avoid defeats such as those it suffered, Tuesday and in 1948.

In an informal speech before the National Press Club the former Minnesota governor—who now heads the University of Pennsylvania—said the results in New York and elsewhere "reemphasized the very serious nature of our defeat in 1948."

Reached 5-Yard Line

He called the 1948 reverses "a crushing defeat after having advanced the ball to the 5-yard line." This was a reference to the Republicans winning control of Congress in 1946, only to lose it two years later.

"Clearly," Stassen said, "the Republican Party needs a tremendous lot of rebuilding if it is to serve the people of America."

He said the Republicans must reorganize both policies and organization and bury intra-party differences in both the foreign and domestic fields.

Oppose Gravy Train

Specifically, Stassen said they should accomplish this by:

1. Opposing what he called the "gravy train" or "give-away" approach of the Truman Administration and domestic programs. "If you take away the incentive to produce and the penalty for loafing, then you are on the road to ruin," he said.

2. Advocating a bi-partisan foreign policy "with vigorous participation in the affairs of all the world."

3. Giving volunteer groups a place in the regular campaign organization, and younger victorious candidates some influence in party councils.

The report is due December 28. Members of the board are: Thomas Magruder, John Lofin, J. Lee Price, W. S. Hoge, jr., and William P. Parramore.

The county school board has filed suit in Circuit Court to acquire the property from its present owner, Mrs. Frances Lee Sickels.

Pilot Breaks Rule—Flies Minus Wings

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 9 (AP). With unvarying precision, student pilots wheeled their Douglas AD-1 Skyraiders down the taxiway at Charleston, R. I., for simulated carrier takeoffs.

The routine was the same for each; taxi, lower the folded wings, zoom into the air—but, what's this?

The control tower officer froze at his post when he noticed suddenly that one of the students had rolled far beyond the 300-foot mark where the planes usually become airborne.

At 2500 feet the plane finally left the runway and began to climb. At 250 feet altitude it banked steeply to the left and plunged into a clump of trees.

"What happened?" queried the dazed pilot when the rescue crew freed his scratched and bruised body from the demolished aircraft.

"Nothing much," he was told. "You just forgot to unfold your wings."

Details of this feat were contained in official reports received at Douglas El Segundo (Calif.) plant from a Douglas service representative and were confirmed by the Navy.

It is the only known instance of an aircraft becoming airborne with its wings in the folded position, a necessity to save space aboard carriers.

Quirino Outdistances Laurel By 114,000; Court Fight Likely

Manila, Nov. 9. (AP).—President Elpidio Quirino, friend of the United States, tonight grabbed a 114,000-vote lead in the Philippines presidential election. His political foes prepared to go to court.

Unofficial returns from less than one third of the republic's precincts gave Quirino 770,458 to 655,978 for Jose P. Laurel, puppet President under the Japanese who was backed by anti-American forces. Jose Avelino, Quirino political enemy, trailed with 270,183.

Official returns, far behind the unofficial count, gave Quirino 374,000, Laurel 294,532, Avelino 59,183. Complete official returns covered less than one-fifth of the nation's municipalities.

Chairman Euligio Rodriguez of Laurel's Nacionalista Party told the Associated Press he had strongly protested to the commission on elections the conduct of voting in five precincts dominated by Quirino.

May Appeal to High Court

Rodriguez prepared to appeal to the Supreme Court to prevent the commission from certifying returns from the provinces, which lie in the central and southern Philippines.

The Liberal Party of Quirino denied the implication of fraud. It noted that the voting was peaceful in Occidental Negros, one of the protested provinces.

The confirmed death toll from Tuesday's voting stood at 26, with more than a score of Filipinos wounded.

The total vote in the election will run well over four million, or more than 80 percent of the registered vote.

Seven Quirino Senators Likely

More attention was being paid to the congressional race, where six Nacionalista candidates were among the leaders in the nationwide voting for the eight Senate seats to be filled.

Backers of Quirino expected the President, however, to carry seven of his eight Senate candidates into office on the strength of his plurality.

Also at stake in the election are 98 House heats and the vice presidency.

St. Xavier Services Held Here

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Washington Catholics yesterday took part in a day-long veneration service for the right arm of St. Francis Xavier.

Services began with a morning procession of Georgetown University students and faculty members, and ended with ceremonies last night at Holy Trinity Church., 36th and O sts. nw.

In the morning procession the treasured relic was carried from Holy Trinity Church, where it had remained overnight, to the quadrangle of Georgetown University.

Carried in Procession

It was carried in the procession by the Very Rev. David Nugent, S. J., Provincial of the Maryland province of the Society of Jesus.

Open air benediction services in the university quadrangle were conducted by the Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., president of Georgetown, assisted by the Rev. Gerald Yates, S.J., dean of the graduate school, and by the Rev. Edward Jacklin, S.J., dean of the undergraduate school.

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S.J., pastor of Holy Trinity Church, carried the relic from the university to the Georgetown Visitation Convent, then to Georgetown University Hospital where sisters, doctors, nurses and patients took part in services in the hospital chapel, and then to the Good Shepherd Convent.

Special Student Services

The relic was then returned to Holy Trinity Church for veneration from 1 p. m. on through the evening. High school and grade school students took part in special services at 2:30 p. m. There was a steady procession of others through the afternoon to venerate the relic.

Father Nugent conducted the evening services at Holy Trinity, with the sermon by the Rev. Eugene B. Gallagher, S.J., of the Georgetown faculty.

After the closing service at Holy Trinity, the relic was taken to St. Aloysius Church, North Capitol and I sts. for veneration services throughout today.

A group of Catholic school superintendents was told yesterday that it is the responsibility of the educator to "purge-away" the "sorry elements of our heritage."

The Rev. John Courtney Murry, S. J., of the Jesuit Seminary at Woodstock, Md., said that only the "noble heritage" of political and social democracy should be transmitted to students.

Father Murray spoke at the opening session of a two-day conference of the department of superintendents of the National Catholic Educational Association meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

He declared that America has "a deplorable tradition of racial and religious prejudices, of economic injustices that have resulted in an iniquitous distribution of wealth and economic power."

"We have a record of corrupt and irresponsible use of political power, of a lack of concern on the part of the citizenry for the conscientious use of their political rights.

"Our social tradition has been materialistic in the extreme focused on an ideal of comfort, not of goodness, animated by an ideal of individual success rather than of integrity in the fulfillment of social obligations.

"Most important, perhaps, we have a history of lawlessness behind us," he declared.

The priest said that the Catholic school, because it is a church affiliated school, has a curriculum "inspired by the Christian idea of man and of the meaning of human life."

As a "socially affiliated" school, he said, "it cannot and does not divorce itself from the destinies of the society in which it functions."

The superintendents' meeting attended by more than 100 Catholic educators will continue today with "workshop" discussions of curriculum, community relationships, building programs and ways of planning for increased enrollments.

School Aides, P-TA to Seek 7 Buildings

Fairfax County school and P-TA officials yesterday tentatively agreed to seek construction of seven elementary schools in Falls Church district, to be paid for under the proposed school bond issue.

Also to be requested are additions to six existing schools in the district. Proposed new schools and the number of classrooms are:

Shirley-Duke, 20; Graham Road, 20; Westlawn, 10; Willston, 16; Woodburn, six; Bailey's, 12; and Mt. Pleasant School of Negroes, six.

Additions were slated for Annandale Elementary School, seven classrooms Lincolnia, three; Oak Street, auditorium; Weyanoke, four; Lee-Jackson, remodeling; and Falls Church High School, four.

Construction of one school was set up for Centreville district—a four-room building at Clifton. A three-room addition to Centreville School was proposed.

In Lee district, school and P-TA officials called for addition of six classrooms at Burke school, and three each to Fairview and Lorton schools.

You Americans Are Pretty Bad, But Friend Finds You're Tops

Philadelphia, Nov. 9 (AP).—How important in your life is your bathtub, refrigerator, the money in your pocket or a new car?

If you set great store by these possessions, you're a typical American, a Quaker schoolman said today.

Erici Warner Johnson, headmaster of the Friends Central School, old and well-known private Quaker institution, sized up the great American public individually and found 10 faults common to the typical resident of the United States of America.

Poor Sense of Values

An inadequate sense of values resulting in an over-concern with material possessions was high on his list.

Here's the rest of the American profile as sketched by Johnson at a religious education meeting of Friends.

1. "We don't think clearly, find it hard to arrive at independent judgment and harder still to stick to that judgment in face of strong opposition.

2. "We rush too fast and don't know how to contemplate.

3. "We are undisciplined and lack self control.

4. "We naively believe we are superior to all other nations and people. We forget that most of the people of the world are neither white, Christian, nor American.

Unprepared for Change

5. "We have lost our courageous will to explore new ideas and methods, consequently we are not prepared to meet a change.

6. "We still tend to rely on force as the final arbiter in corflicts.

7. "We are unprepared for family life—men and women don't know how to get along together.

8. "We do not practice what we preach—Democracy and Christianity.

9. "We lack imagination to consider things from the other fellow's point of view." Johnson called this trait a selfish one.

But despite these faults, Johnson said, "American people still seem to me to have more virtue and goodness in them than any other I have known."

Gas Rates Up 6.14 Percent

main points contested by Robert's group.

The PUC opinion disposed of the volumnious testimony by Robert's principal witness, George H. Harbaugh, an accountant, with the comment that "unfortunately, his exhibits contained so many serious errors that the results reflected thereon, and the testimony offered in support thereof, are of no value in the determination of the issues in this proceeding."

Ordered to Restudy Method

Roberts last night claimed a partial victory in that the PUC ruled the company should restudy its methods of allocating merchandising costs to general operating expenses.

The PUC said the company was not conforming with prescribed accounting methods by making no charges to the appliance department for general officers' salaries, high-level supervision of salesmen, transportation and other charges.

The PUC rejected the Government's proposal to write off gas conversion costs over a 15-year period, instead of the present 10 years, and hence make possible a smaller rate boost.

The company last sought and obtained a general rate increase 29 years ago. It did realize, however, roughly a 2 percent rate boost in 1942 when the sliding scale method of rate-fixing was adopted.

Ober Attacks Court Ruling Voiding Maryland Loyalty Law

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 9 (AP).—A Baltimore judge's ruling that Maryland's anti-subversive law is unconstitutional has been attacked by Frank B. Ober, Baltimore attorney who headed the State commission that drew up the act known by his name.

Ober, in a brief filed in the Court of Appeals, contends that if Circuit Judge Joseph Sherbow's decision is allowed to stand "it will deal a death blow to the remaining rights of the States under our Federal Constitution by denying to them the most important police power of all—the power of self-preservation."

The act was passed during the 1949 session of the General Assembly and was signed by Governor Lane.

It provided, among other things, that all employes and office-holders of the State and its subdivisions would have to sign loyalty affidavits.

Proponents said the act was drawn up to "destroy communism without destroying Americanism."

Judge Sherbow ruled August 3 that the so-called Ober Law violated constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press, speech and assembly and due process of law, is a bill of attainder, and is too vague for a criminal statute.

The State appealed the ruling. The Court of Appeals will meet Wednesday to set a date for a hearing.

Ober filed his brief as a friend of the court and on behalf of the commission he headed. He said:

"The opinion (of the lower court) is so sweeping that it would invalidate substantially all the legislation of the 46 States which have passed statutes of sedition (38) and/or loyalty (24)."

He added that the ruling would invalidate the Smith Act, the Federal statute under which the 11 top Communists were convicted in New York.

Ober will argue at the hearing that there is less limitation put on what a person may say publicly under the Maryland statute than there is under the Smith Act.

Only 2 Channels Per City Proposed for TV; De Forest to Testify Today on Color Video

By The Associated Press

A suggestion that television can best be developed on a few channels, rather than a lot of them, came yesterday from Ulysses A. Sanabria, president of American Television, Inc. of Chicago.

Sanabria, whose company manufactures electronic equipment and operates a technical school for television engineers, expressed belief that each city across the country should have just two video channels.

He testified in the Federal Communications Commission's current hearings on possible color broadcasting. The FCC members, who have devoted a year of study to the finding of more channels in the broadcasting spectrum for televising, indicated by questions that they consider the limit channel idea a new one.

Sanabria said that under his proposal there might be many individual stations in each city, and that these stations would share time on the two available channels. This, he said, would result in better programs, in view of the large expense involved for any station to provide six or eight hours of high-quality programming every day, seven days in the week.

"There should be no monopoly," he testified. "But one good program is worth more than several poor programs. And the set owner would always have a choice of two programs."

Dr. Lee De Forest, radio pioneer and research director for Sanabria's company, failed to make a scheduled appearance to testify on color yesterday, sending word that he preferred not to make a statement at this time.

Noting that De Forest has discussed color in technical colors recently and has indicated that he is working on a color system of his own, FCC Attorney Harry M. Plotkin suggested the commission might use its supbpena powers to obtain his views. However, a conference later in the day between De Forest's attorneys and the commission resulted in an announcement that the 76-year-old scientist will come here from Chicago and appear voluntarily this afternoon.

Shah of Iran May Bring Gift For Barkley

By the United Press

His imperial majesty, the Shah of Iran, who will soon pay a state visit to Washington, may bring a wedding present for Vice President Alben W. Barkley, according to reports reaching here yesterday.

The Shah will arrive November 16. He doesn't personally know the "Veep," who is getting married to a comely St. Louis widow on November 18, but Oriental authorities say the gift will be primarily in recognition of the Vice President's reputation as a story-teller. Travelers in the East have been amazed to learn that Barkley is held in reverence in that area where story-telling has been a refined art for thousands of years.

Nature of the gift is not known here but there have been discreet inquiries as to what would be appropriate.

Trucker Gets Year For Manslaughter In Case Retrial

Rodger Burrell, 49, of Bakerstown, Laurel, Md., who had been acquitted in a lower court of manslaughter stemming from an auto accident, yesterday was convicted of the charge in Prince Georges County Circuit Court, and was sentenced to serve a year.

The defendant had been cleared of the charge by Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens in Hyattsville Police Court on the grounds of insufficient evidence of negligence. At that time Owens found Burrell guilty only of reckless driving and passing a stop sign.

Later the State appealed the decision to the Circuit Court and a new trial was ordered.

Burrell was operator of a truck that collided on October 1 with another car at 4th and Prince Georges sts., Laurel. Mrs. Susie Slye, 71, of Laurel was fatally injured.

NASD Record Over 10 Years Brings Praise

By S. Oliver Goodman

Self-regulation by over-the-counter securities dealers over the past 10 years "can be judged a success," according to Homer V. Cherrington, professor of finance at Northwestern University.

Writing in the November issue of the Harvard Business Review, Cherrington said: "Never in the history of American business has there been such an experiment in self-regulation as that which has prevailed in the over-the-counter securities markets since the organization of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., in the summer of 1939."

The article pointed out that the NASD has never had fewer than 2180 members and that the number of complaints—especially since 1944 — has been "impressively small."

"In recent years," wrote Cherrington, "the SEC has, from time to time called the attention of the association to what it believed to be infractions of association rules by certain of its members, with the suggestion that further inquiry be undertaken. The history of the number of such cases . . . is 11 in 1946; seven in 1947 and eight in 1948."

Concluding, the article commented: "It is . . . valid to suppose that the NASD has rendered praiseworthy service to our American economy by helping in an aggressive manner to foster high standards of commercial honor, to prevent fraudulent and manipulative acts and practices and in general to protect investors against that unscrupulous fringe in the securities business that knows no law save the law of undisciplined self-interest."

AIRLINE EARNINGS: Trans World Airline reported net operating earnings of $3,931,910 before taxes in the first nine months, compared with a net loss of $1,810,017 in the same period last year. Net for the third quarter this year was $3,570,003 before taxes, against $254,176 in the same 1948 period . . . National Airlines, Inc., showed a net loss of $521,313 in the three months ended September 30, against a net loss of $879,701 in the like 1948 period. Revenues of $3,101,919 in the period (traditionally National's lowest traffic quarter) showed a gain of 66 percent over last year.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Gen. Baird H. Markham, 63-year-old former commander of the Oklahoma National Guard, yesterday was named acting president of the American Petroleum Institute, succeeding William R. Boyd, jr., who retired . . . John E. Bierwirth was elected president of National Distillers Products Corp., succeeding Seton Porter, who was named board chairman . . . W. R. Armstrong, jr., has been elevated to Washington division station manager of National Airlines . . . Henry W. Gadsden and W. W. Lauer, jr. have been elected vice presidents of Sharp & Dohme, Inc.

BONDS VOTED: In addition to balloting for candidates in Tuesday's elections, voters decided on about two billion dollars of proposed bond issues of State and local governments. In most cases the voters approved the spending, although the New Jersey electorate apparently rejected a 105-million-dollar veterans' bonus issue while favoring a 25-million offering for mental hospitals. Pennsylvania adopted a 500-million veterans bonus and New York State approved a proposition that would boost the subsidized housing fund by 300 million. Approval of a 250-million issue of school aid bonds was virtually assured in latest returns from California.

EARNINGS: International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., reported net income of $26,077,125 or $1.68 a common share for the first nine months, compared with $29,920,873 or $1.95 a share in the same period. Other earnings statements:

Moral Energy Urged as Anti-Red Weapon

The United States must meet the "intense moral energy" of communism within the next 10 to 15 years or it will lose world leadership for centuries, Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson declared last night.

Dr. Johnson, president of Howard University, spoke at a banquet of the thirty-third annual convocation of the School of Religion of Howard University.

He warned that if the United States makes the mistake of putting its reliance upon military power, it will lose whether or not it wins in a test of physical power. Military defeat of communism, he said, would cause the very conditions which it would need for its spread.

The only way to defeat communism, Dr. Johnson asserted, is to generate and put into effect in the relevant areas of human life a "superior stream of intelligently directed moral energy."

Pointing out that that energy comes from God, the speaker declared that "in a time of crisis the religious communions of the Nation are called upon as never before to lay hold upon the source of moral energy which we call God, and make it available swiftly before it is too late."

The university president stated that the United States has been placed by historical developments in a position from which it cannot retreat.

The United States must realize that it faces in communism "the most thoroughgoing and passionate enthusiasm for establishment of a just social order on earth since the beginning of Christianity," Dr. Johnson asserted.

Earlier, Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, head of the New York area of the Methodist Church declared that the church must heal its divisions because "we cannot win the world for Christ on the basis of guerilla warfare."

Discussing churches in the United States, he expressed the belief that there is more unity than is generally realized, but suggested that there should be a reunion of the great church families where no fundamental doctrinal differences exist.

White House News Corps Fetes Charles G. Ross

Charles G. Ross, press secretary to President Truman, was given a surprise celebration yesterday on his sixty-fourth birthday.

One by one, White House reporters dropped in to voice trumped-up complaints about his handling of news. When Ross appeared about ready to explode, they began singing "Happy Birthday" and presenting him gifts, such as penitentiary towels.

Ross, a former newspaperman himself—with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—had the time of his life.

His old schoolmate at the Independence, Mo., high school, President Truman, dropped in on the festivities.

Wilkins on Trial For Murder of Father-in-Law

Herbert F. Wilkins, 34, of 1028 4th st. ne., was on trial yesterday in District Court on a charge of second-degree murder in the bludgeon death of his father-in-law, William Benezette, 73.

The deceased, according to police, intervened in an argument Wilkins was having with his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Wilkins, shortly before the death blow was struck.

Fire in Paper Rolls Menaces Chemical Plant

Fire believed to have been a result of spontaneous combustion yesterday caused damage of $2000 to rolls of paper stacked on a lot adjacent to the Peoples Chemical Co. 1911 Kenilworth ave., Kenilworth, Md.

Six Prince Georges County volunteer fire departments fought for three hours to keep the flames from spreading to the nearby chemical plant. The paper is owned by Robert Nikolson, police said.

3 Children Bitten; Spaniel Is Captured

Three children in the Four Corners section of Silver Spring reportedly were bitten yesterday by a black cocker spaniel, which later was captured by police and taken to the University of Maryland for rabies tests.

The victims, according to police, were Clifton T. Owens, jr., 4, of 10126 Hereford pl.; Charlotte Thomas, 7, of 10009 Kenross, and Nancy Lee Nairn, 9, of 9914 Grayson ave. Ownership of the dog was not immediately ascertained.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 60 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

15 Proprietors Of 'Hotels' Face Court Action

The District License Bureau yesterday acted to crack down on proprietors of rooming and lodging houses who advertise their places as hotels.

Warrants, sworn to by Superintendent of Licenses C. T. Nottingham, were issued against owners of 15 such establishments in the downtown area. Nottingham said about 75 places may be involved altogether and that further warrants will be sought.

The 15 now facing court action are all licensed to operate either lodging or rooming houses, the Bureau said. Nottingham said their specific offense consisting of placing signs bearing the word hotel outside their establishments.

This designation, he said, was in violation of regulations adopted by the Commissioners last year setting up standards for hotels and other rented living quarters. Most places were given a year to comply with the regulations. The period of grace expired November 1, Nottingham said.

If convicted, the proprietors face maximum penalties of a $300 fine or 90 days in jail or both.

Persons named in the warrants and the names of their establishments are:

John Payseklan, York Hotel, 939 9th st. nw.; Savarsh John Francis Tarpinian, Taft Hotel Annex, 740 9th st. nw.; Vera Novripanian, Park Hotel, 909 13th st. nw.; John Harry Khosrofian, Virginia Hotel, 509 E st. nw.; Garbed Papazian, Hotel Savoy, 913 E st. nw.; Sarkis Vahouny, Atlantic Hotel, 901 13th st. nw.

A Leisurely Job On the Forsytes

By Richard L. Coe

"THAT FORSYTE WOMAN," at the Palace, is a lavish, Technicolored telling of the first volume in John Galsworthy's Forsyte Saga series. Greer Garson has the title role and, while it's long, talkative and musty, there is a certain lush sincerity about it.

Although it tips its hand with its soap-opera title, this obviously painstaking effort makes a point of telling its story by illustrating each character's reaction on the others. This gives each an interest not always found in the hazardous transfusion of written words into celluloid.

Further, it is helped immensely by the beauty and personal charm of Miss Garson, whose loveliness in Technicolor sheds a radiance which easily blinds one to more mundane matters.

The story (from "The Man of Property") has been done countless times on screen and paper; it was the handling of it which I unfortunately do not remember from Eng. Lit. 51.

But it was certainly his character-probing and detail that made his novel so admired 20 years ago. And these are the points which the screen writers, Jan Lustig, Ivan Tors and James B. Williams, have stressed. Their approach is leisurely. They attempt to dissect, not merely illustrate. That they do not quite succeed is only an indication of the difficulty of their problem.

The Forsytes are a smug, wealthy, upper-middle-class family who respect only the goods of this world and what money will buy. Errol Flynn, one of the younger Forsytes (and he plays him very well), is attracted to a beautiful, intelligent young woman of good background and no income. He dogs her into marrying him and forces his reluctant family to accept her.

On Possessiveness

He finds that own his wife though he does, he cannot possess her as he has been accustomed to possessing everything else he has bought. Instinctively, she recognizes this tragically acquisitive husband she has taken on and, just as instinctively, recoils from him. After two years of marriage they are no closer than at the start.

A black sheep of the Forsythe family (played by Walter Pidgeon) has become a painter, and his daughter, whom he is never permitted to visit, has been brought up by three frustrated aunts. They expect her to marry within the family code of bettering herself. Instead, the girl (Janet Leigh) sets her heart on a romantic architect, presses her young aunt, Greer, to have him design a home for her.

Instinctively the two are attracted, but the married woman consistently spurns the man, admitting that she is attracted to him but knowing that the girl's heart would be broken. The girl makes the discovery for herself, approaches her father in her distress, and, after the architect's accidental death, five years later finds the principal characters reasonably sorted out.

By detailing how each action leads to further action by other characters, the story is unfolded in a fashion that will be far too leisurely for most audiences.

Flynn Suits Role

The fact remains, Errol Flynn splendidly details the futility of a man who thinks he can possess anyone by money. Galsworthy clearly was not discussing the possibility of one person making another love him; his theme was the Forsyte family falling and its ilk.

As the cold, perplexed Soames, Flynn suits the part to the button, never once glimpsing the falseness of his golden idol.

Miss Garson, apart from her gorgeous coloring and striking face, is more than credible as the lady who causes so much trouble, and the sentimental will be pleased by her ultimate alliance with Walter Pidgeon.

A weak link in the cast is Robert Young, who lacks warmth and dash as the architect. Janet Leigh is properly ingenue as the niece and the balance of the cast is carefully Victorian.

"THAT FORSYTE WOMAN." M.-G.-M release produced by Leon Gordon. Screen play by Jan Lustig, Ivan Tors and James B. Williams from "The Man of Property," by John Galsworthy. Additional dialogue by Arthur Wimperis. Photographed in Technicolor by Joseph Ruttenberg. Music by Bronislau Kaper. Directed by Compton Bennett. At the Palace.

Lord Mayor's Horses Bolt, Hurt 30 Londoners

London, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Thirty persons were injured today when horses drawing the state carriage of London's Lord Mayor stampeded into a crowd watching the centuries-old Lord Mayor's parade. Eight of the injured were hospitalized. The others received emergency first aid treatment in shops along Queen Victoria street, where the colorful procession, which traditionally celebrates a change in London's mayors, was turned momentarily into panic.

Women and children were knocked down by the bolting horses and members of the Royal Air Force band marching ahead of the carriage were flattened in the street.

The coach was that of the outgoing Lord Mayor, Sir George Aylwen. He was not injured and continued the parade in the carriage of Sir Frederick Rowland, his successor.

Indicted Paterson Mayor Reelected

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 9 (AP).—Mayor Michael U. De Vita climbed back into the driver's seat at city hall today, still under indictment for allegedly obstructing a grand jury gambling probe.

The 37-year-old Democratic Mayor garnered nearly twice as many votes—32,672 to 16,703—as his Republican opponent, Dr. William Marrocco.

The Democratic sweep gave De Vita, Paterson's youngest Mayor, a solidly Democratic board of aldermen, knocking out of office the only Republican on the board.

Stalin Orders Poles to Speed Collectivization

Belgrade, Nov. 9 (NYHT).—Prime Minister Josef V. Stalin has intervened directly in Poland to order a speed-up of collectivization of Polish agriculture within the next six months, it was learned tonight from usually well-informed quarters.

The Russian leader is reported to have addressed a harsh letter to the Polish Communist Party demanding that Kolhozes (collective farms) be organized on a large scale without delay. A passage from the letter is understood to have said: "Enough of coquetry in Poland with kulak elements . . . the kolhozes must be built in 1950."

Fur Goodness Sakes! Just Revenooers!

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 9 (AP).—A United States Internal Revenue agent—with four of his revenue mates—went into a fur shop today, looked at some fur to match a child's coat and then the five left and crossed the street to a restaurant.

A crime-conscious fur shop clerk rushed to a phone and reported "five suspicious men" to police. Police rushed squad cars and plainclothesmen. It all ended quietly with an exchange of credentials.

Specialist Tells How Deafness May Be Halted

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 9.—Diet control, vitamins and amino acids can halt chronic and progressive deafness, a New York ear specialist today told surgeons in assembly here.

Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, director and professor of otology, New York Polyclinic Medical School, made the claim, classifying otosclerosis, major cause of hearing loss, as a deficiency which yields to replacement therapy.

He reported marked success in treating a series of 581 patients suffering from the progressively deafening disorder.

All but "several," he said, benefitted to the extent of complete halt in the degenerative process, and "many" regained some of the hearing loss already suffered before treatment was begun. The "several" failures, he reported, were found due to other causes, such as cancer.

Help for Mental Patients

Dr. Kopetzky presented his findings to eye, ear, nose and throat specialists attending the annual assembly of the United States chapter, International Congress of Surgeons here.

Earlier today, in general scientific assembly, a Philadelphia brain specialist told of success in electric-needle brain surgery on mentally disturbed patients. The technique, said Dr. Ernest A. Spiegel, may soon be extended to patients with convulsive epilepsy.

Reporting on his efforts to prevent hearing loss, Dr. Kopetzky said that only the surface has been scratched in the scientific search for the cause and cure of otosclerosis, generally considered an affliction of the aging.

Enough, however, is known of the ailment to show that it can be inherited, or at least that the faulty metabolic processes which bring it on can be passed from generation to generation, Dr. Kopetzky said.

He advocated preventive therapy in diet control and supplementary vitamins and amino acids for the mother, to stop the hereditary chain of similar affliction on the children.

The New York specialist said he charted his course of treatment after studying the blood chemistry of his patients. All, he said, showed imbalances correctible by oral administrations of a concentration of amino acids, coenzymes, vitamins and trace metals. As a further aid, he advocated once-monthly injections of a special thyroid extract.

"If the treatment does not show success," Dr. Kopetzky told the specialists "you can be certain there is another factor in the patient's body which is altering the (treatment) activity."

In at least one of his failures, he explained, the factor proved to be a gastric cancer which was not uncovered until a general examination was made to explain the patient's failure to respond.

Brain Operations Described

Dr. Spiegel, professor of experimental and applied neurology, Temple University medical school, in his paper told of brain operations performed by the stereoencephalograph, first devised for human use about three years ago. The apparatus consists of a head-cradling instrument which permits precisely calculated penetration of the brain with an electric needle.

From favorable results obtained with 42 mentally disturbed patients, Dr. Spiegel said electroencephalotomy does not result in the personality changes which often accompany other types of brain surgery, such as prefrontal and transorbital lobotomies and removal of the frontal lobes of the brain.

At the same time, he said, the operation accomplishes the same beneficial results as the others, the relief of emotional tension of the mentally disturbed.

In the operation, he said, the slender, encased electric needle is plunged through a hole cut in the skull, to the thalamus, deep in the brain and directly above the mid-brain. The thalamus contains the center of nerve cells whose fibers reach out to the front brain.

After the needle is properly positioned, an electric current is passed through for one minute, coagulating (like boiling water to egg whites) a small portion of the thalamus, destroying the nerve cluster. Fibers from that center are the same ones cut in prefrontal lobotomies, but, Dr. Spiegel argued, in the electric-needle procedure other nerve fibers whose destruction in lobotomics cause loss of responsibility are not affected.

Recently, the neurosurgeon said, the electric-needle apparatus was coupled with an electroencephalograph (which records electrical output of the brain), and the thalamus was established as a disturbance center for petit mal (small seizure) epilepsy.

Blue Plate Special:

FOR NORTH CAROLINA U., one of the few schools with the temerity to schedule Notre Dame, there will be some balm no matter what the score may be on Saturday afternoon at Yankee Stadium. They'll share alike in the gate receipts that will hit the $300,000 mark, with the 74,000 seats already sold out.

Each team will take back to its school athletic treasury a hefty check for $116,000, according to the latest breakdown. That sum makes allowances, also, for the $35,000 stadium rental for the day. Carolina's bid for the Sugar Bowl invitation is already blighted by those defeats by Tennessee and L. S. U., but the Sugar Bowl never dished up as much as the Tar Heels' Yankee Stadium "take."

POVICH

IF MARYLAND is compelled to fight an uphill battle against Boston University on Saturday at Fenway Park, well—no football team was ever better conditioned for it. For the past week, Coach Jim Tatum has actually had his Maryland squad scrimmaging uphill, in practice.

Tatum, a fore-handed fellow in all matters, has been advised that the Fenway Park gridiron is on an uphill pitch and he wants his lads oriented to it. "Maybe after all this uphill scrimmage my boys, when they get to the level parts of that Boston field, will think they're going down hill," observed Tatum.

He disclaims any originality for the tactic, pointing out that about 10 years ago Dr. Eddie Anderson, at Iowa, pulled the same strategy before the game with Notre Dame. Iowa beat the Irish, 7-6, that season.

"But maybe I ought to be hoping most for a bright sunny day," says Tatum. "B. U. practices at night, and perhaps the sun will get in their eyes."

EXCUSE MY TITTER, but I note that George Marshall, the Redskin president, says that his new coach, Herman Ball, will get "a free rein." That means, no doubt, that Ball can pick the necktie he will wear on any given day, select his own desserts and choose his own assistant water boys.

When Dud deGroot quit as the Redskins' coach a few years back to take the job with Los Angeles in the All-America Conference, he confessed that his prerogatives as Redskin head coach were somewhat limited. "They did let me substitute the quarterback, the ends and the center, though," he said. "And they let me pick my own teeth."

TULANE FELL on its face in the big game with Notre Dame a couple of weeks back, but the New Orleans school deserves some sort of trophy for doing the best public relations job of the season. It happened last Saturday, on the afternoon of the Navy game.

Fans who arrived in the Tulane stadium early, were entertained for almost an hour by the play-by-play broadcast of the Michigan State-Notre Dame game, over the loud speakers. Even when the Navy and Tulane teams appeared on the field for their warmups, Tulane officials continued to treat the customers to the Irish-Michigan State broadcast, switching it off only at the opening kick-off.

WALTER BYERS, secretary of the Big Ten, has come up with the most sensible suggestion in the midst of the All-America madness. Byers has recommended to the Football Writers Association of America that future all-America teams be selected on a basis of wholly offensive and wholly defensive merits—two teams in fact.

As the selections now are made, there are All-American backs who have never made a tackle in their college careers, what with coaches jerking them the moment the ball is lost. The fad for the platoon system of football has reduced the stars to specialists, with the defensive players rarely getting a break in the publicity that makes for All-America selections.

THAT WAS AN unconsciable delay by Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers in announcing that Burt Shotton would be rehired for the 1950 season. Until the other day, Rickey was mum on the subject, generating some wonder as to what he expects of his manager. Shotton, in his own two full seasons with the Dodgers, turned in two pennants.

Rickey and Shotton hit it off rather well, though, it must be said. Back in 1947, when Rickey brought the gray-haired Shotton out of retirement to make him the Brooklyn manager, Shotton worked without a contract for half the season. He signed one, only because National League President Ford Frick pointed out that such undocumented faith in each other was against the league rules.

Can Missouri Trip Mighty Oklahoma?

OKLAHOMA AT MISSOURI. A battle between two teams that use the Split-T formation, one of football's newer wrinkles.

Oklahoma is ranked third in the Nation but Missouri is dangerous. Can Missouri knock off unbeaten Oklahoma?

That and other tough ones are in The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners football contest this week.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the twenty-first game, each contest will give the "Probable Score."

Auerbach Will Coach Tri-City Pros

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Arnold (Red) Auerbach, who resigned this spring as coach of the Washington Caps after a three-year tenure, is returning to pro basketball, The Washington Post learned last night.

He has been named coach of the Tri-City (Ill.) Blackhawks, of the National Basketball Association, and will assume his new duties immediately.

Since leaving the Caps, whom he piloted to two Eastern Division titles and a tie for a third, Auerbach has been a member of Duke University's physical education staff. He resigned from Duke yesterday.

At Tri-City, which has won only one of its four NBA games, Auerbach succeeds Roger Potter, who was in his second year as coach of the Midwestern pros.

The deal which brings Auerbach back to pro basketball was completed in Buffalo over the weekend where he and Leo Ferris, executive director of the Blackhawks, met. Auerbach was given a two-year contract at a raise over the $8000 he reputedly received from Uline Arena for coaching the Caps.

It is ironic that he received a two-year contract at Tri-City because he resigned from the Caps when Mike Uline, owner of the local pro basketeers, refused to give him a similar contract here.

In addition to being a member of Duke's physical education staff, Auerbach also helped Coach Gerry Gerard with the Blue Devil basketball team.

At Tri-City, which along with eight other former National League teams became a member of the expanded National Basketball Association this year, Auerbach inherits a young, inexperienced team, which observers feel will become progressively better as the 58-game schedule wears on.

John Mahnken Joins Auerbach at Tri-City

Moline, Ill., Nov. 9).—Johnny Mahnken, 6 foot, 8 inch center from Georgetown today joined his old coach, Red Auerbach, with the Tri-City Blackhawks.

The Hawks today secured Mahnken from Fort Wayne. Mahnken was an original member of the Washington Caps which were organized by Auerbach in 1946. Auerbach today signed to coach the Blackhawks.

"THE CAT" POUNCES—Center Johnny (The Cat) Grinnell of George Washington, shows how he's been able to recover eight enemy fumbles in seven games this season. He has also intercepted four passes. Grinnell, a senior, from Arlington, is the only Colonial who has played in every game for four years. He'll be ready to continue the streak against Duke Saturday at Griffith Stadium

Friedlund Heads Them

5 Duke Veterans of 62-0 Rout Figure to Bedevil GW Again

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington will be haunted by five familiar Blue Devils Saturday when the Colonials meet Duke at Griffith Stadium.

Foremost is Jack Friedlund, 200-pound wingback, who last year messed up G. W.'s passing attack with three interceptions. He set up two touchdowns and scored a third.

Other prominent members of last year's 62-0 Duke massacre of G. W. are Tailback Billy Cox, Fullback Jack Mounie, Quarterback Paul Stephanz and Tackle Lou Allen. All are still going strong.

Cox passed for one touchdown against G. W. last year. He has been the mainspring in Wallace Wade's single wing attack this year.

His passing record is 46 completions in 89 tries for 631 yards and three touchdowns.

The 6-foot, 2-inch 180 pounder also plays safety on defense. He hurt his leg early in the Wake Forest game, and that's one of the reasons the Devils were upset, 27-7.

Duke's other loss was to Navy, 28-14. The Devils hold victories over Richmond, Tennessee, North Carolina State, Virginia Tech and Georgia Tech.

Mounie, 190-pounder, who takes Cox's handoffs on spinner plays, rammed over for two touchdowns last year.

Stephanz is a good blocking back, but he grabbed a pass for a score last season.

Allen, a 220-pounder, is being boomed for All-America tackle by Southern Conference followers.

Redskins Sure To Give Eagles A 'Ball' Game

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

It will be a "Ball game" that the Redskins stage Sunday at Griffith Stadium, although the Philadelphia Eagles are expected to have things pretty much their own way.

In addition to presenting their brand-new head coach of that name, Herman Ball, the Redskins will come up with a halftime stunt which should impress the word on at least a few lucky fans.

The Redskin Band of 110-piece will be divided into four sections, one on each sideline and goal, and at a signal each musician will pass an autographed souvenir football into the stands. Any similarity between these passes and Sammy Baugh's will be accidential.

Three stalwart veterans who missed the Redskins' earlier 49-14 shellacking by the Eagles will be ready this time—and needed Jim Peebles, defensive end and tackle star who also does the kicking off, has recovered from a shoulder ailment. Big, rough Joe Tereshinski's leg has healed and he'll be in evidence on both offense and defense. And backing up the line on defense, perhaps playing a little fullback on offense, will be 230-pound Ed Quirk.

The devastating Eagles, leaders of the eastern division and at least a 21-point favorite Sunday, go into the game with two major casualties. Johnny Green, a standout defensive end, is definitely out for three weeks with a wrenched knee. And other wingman, Neill Armstrong, may see limited action

The Redskin slim hopes of victory seem to hinge mostly on keeping possession of the ball. In the previous meeting of the clubs the Eagles scored four of the first five times they had the ball.

If it can't retain possession, Washington must stop the running of Steve Van Buren, Bosh Pritchard, Clyde Scott and a few others, plus the passing of Tommy Thompson. Only one club has done that all year, and it's been three ears since the Redskins did it.

Wilson System Is 'Wasteless'

Three lean years as Woodrow Wilson High football coach have taught Joe Carlo to be thrifty.

That's why he invented the new "wasteless" formation which he springs Friday at 2 p. m. against Western at Central Stadium.

Carlo's linemen are split like Maryland's split T formation, but his backs are lined up in single or double wing formation.

Deception is sacrificed and there is no wasted motion. Every player is assigned to block out a man on every play.

Even on a fake reverse or spinner, every back is assigned to go downfield and knock down an opponent.

Carlo figures that if 10 Wilson players can block out 10 opponents, the Wilson ball carrier will take care of himself against the remaining defender.

Friday's game is important to both Wilson and Western. If Wilson wins, it practically clinches the right to represent the Southern Division in the Interhigh championship game Nov. 25 at Griffith Stadium.

If Western pulls an upset, it preserves its slim chance of playing in the big classic, sponsored by The Washington Post and Board of Education.

Wilson figures to beat Western, which has won two and lost two in Interhigh play, but which whipped the same Wilson team, 28-0, last year.

O'Keefe Is Star; Fulks Held to 14

(Special to The Post)

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—Washington's Caps promptly regained their winning touch here tonight, effortlessly brushing by the Philadelphia Warriors, 84-69, in their NBA contest before only 1500.

Although losing to Minneapolis, 68-66, Tuesday night, the Caps stopped Big George Mikan with 11 points. Tonight, they successfully throttled Joe Fulks, Mikan's predecessor as basketball's top scoring ace.

Dick O'Keefe was the surprise star for Washington. He held Fulks pointless until he went out on personals after four minutes of the third period. A notorious non-scorer, O'Keefe took time to grab 12 for himself.

Johnny Norlander took over and Fulks eventually wound up with four field goals and six of 10 foul attempts.

It didn't have much to do with the outcome. Philadelphia led only at the outset, 3-1, and missed 19 of its first 21 shots.

With the scoring evenly divided among everyone but Coach Bob Feerick, who kept himself on the bench, the Caps soon had a commanding lead.

Scrappy Freddie Scolari, who doesnt' show the least sign of slowing up, paced the winners with 15 points. Chick Reiser tied O'Keefe's dozen and Chuck Halbert made 10 against his former teammates.

Vern Gardner took over Fulks No. 1 spot with seven goals and five foul conversions.

The victory was the third for Washington in four league starts as the visitors connected on 31 of their 81 attempts from the floor. The once-mighty Warriors dropped their fourth game in five starts.

Cook's Title Put in Doubt

Buenos Aires, Nov. 9. (AP).—Finland's P. A. Janhonen, rather than Arthur Cook of Washington, D. C., may be declared the official winner of the individual world championship gold medal in the small bore rifle shooting competition in three positions.

On the basis of Cook's official total of 1161 out of a possible 1200 and other unofficial results, it had appeared that Olympic rifle champion Cook had won the title.

However, an official recount tonight gave Janhonen 1166 points. His and Cook's scores were the only official totals announced. Janhonen gained 13 points over his unofficial total announced at the end of the afternoon's shooting.

The judges said other scores would be reviewed tomorrow and there was a possibility that the Finnish marksman might be beaten.

The officials also said that a recount of Janhonen's score showed he set a new world record for the standing position, .22 caliber rifle at 50 meters, with 381 out of a possible 400 points. His official scores for the other positions were: kneeling, 389 x 400; prone, 396 x 400.

COLLEEN JUST LAUGHS—The rest of the Burns family seems properly awed that Daddy won The Washington Post football contest, but 9-month-old Colleen treats it as a huge joke. This blissful scene at 7318 Forest rd., Hyattsville, includes Terry, 4; Katherine, 2; Daddy Edward and Mother Laila. Maybe Colleen's laughing because she figures her parents won't be able to find a triple-threat baby-sitter to let them attend Army-Navy game

Ed Burns, Legion Employe, Wins Army-Navy Game Trip

Edward Burns waited until the seventh week to enter The Washington Post football contest but came in at midseason form.

Burns, 7318 Forest rd., Hyattsville, Md., topped 16,531 contestants by successfully forecasting the Washington and Lee-VPI tie and picking 17 winners of 20 games listed.

He also picked Notre Dame to beat Michigan State, 35-19, missing the 34-21 actual count by only 3 points.

His victory means the American Legion will be represented at the Army-Navy service classic in Philadelphia, November 26. A legion employee, he wins two all-expense trips to the big game and also picks up four tickets to the Eagles-Redskins game here Sunday.

The excited Mr. Burns, 29, hopes to take wife, Laila, to the Army-Navy game. All they need is a triple-threat baby-sitter for Terry, 4; Katherine, 2, and Colleen, 9 months.

An oversight prevented the first woman from winning this year. Marilynn Benefiel, 1712 N. Quincy, Arlington, picked the Navy-Tulane tie and missed the Notre Dame score by only 2 points.

However, she made a slip and failed to mark the Arkansas-Rice game. It had to be scored a miss against her. She had three misses to two for Burns.

Three other runnerups all were thrown for a loss by all three ties in the 20 contest games. They include Lieut. Col. E. G. Wheeler, National War College; Thomas J. Dollard, 1833 Park rd. nw., and J. T. Buxton, jr., 1135 16th st. nw.

Ellen Olsen, Strimble Win Wrestling Match

Ellen Olsen and Shirley Strimble took two out of three falls from Celia Blevins and Nell Stewart to win the team wrestling match before 2200 last night at Turner's Arena. In the semi-final, Barney Barnard won in 12½ minutes from Laverne Baxter when the latter was disqualified.

In other matches, Marvin Mercer defeated Steve Karras in 31 minutes with a cradle and Joe Kowalski won from Jack LaRue in four minutes with a flying tackle and a body press.

Reds Reject Dodger Bids For 2 Pitchers

By Joe Reichler

Brooklyn, Nov. 9 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds recently rejected a pair of big money bids by the Brooklyn Dodgers for two of their top flight pitchers, it was learned today.

A Dodger official admitted that a flat offer of $200,000 for Righthander Herman Wehmeier was turned down by the Reds' General Manager Warren Giles. Another bid of $100,000 and a couple of unidentified players for veteran Lifthander Kenny Raffensberger met the same fate.

"We haven't given up, however," the source said. "We're still out to get either one of those two pitchers. We feel that either Raffensberger or Wehmeier would insure us another pennant and perhaps a world championship."

The 32-year-old Raffensberger won 18 and lost 17 for the Reds last season. Wehmeier won only 12 games, but is considered more valuable since he is 10 years Raffensberger's junior.

"We are preparing another 'package' deal to present to the Reds," the official said. "I don't see how Giles can turn that one down."

It was believed the Brooks were willing to give to Cincinnati Lefthander Joe Hatten, Catcher Bruce Edwards and a second-rate outfielder in addition to cash for the pitcher they're after.

In Cincinnati, Giles confirmed the Associated Press' earlier disclosure that the Dodgers offered a fancy price for one of the club's hurlers.

Prep — High

Players of the Week

JOE HANDS
St. John's

END JOE HANDS was St. Johns' leading hand in the Cadet's 26-0 victory over Georgetown Prep last week.

He recovered a fumble to set up the first Cadet touchdown and then scored it on a 14-yard pass from Bobby McLindon.

For that and more, he is The Washington Post's Prep Player of the Week.

Hands, 6-feet and 190 pounds, played a great defensive game. He nabbed the Prep ball carriers every time they came around his end, and he turned the other plays inside so the tackles could make the stop.

Joe is a splendid placekicker and takes care of St. Johns' kickoffs and extra points. He booted two extra points against Georgetown Prep.

Sixteen-year-old Hands and McLindon are the most feared passing combination in prep ranks.

RALPH PHILLIPS
George Washington High

GEORGE WASHINGTON HIGH Center Ralph Phillips is psychic, his opponents say.

He seems to know ahead of time exactly the kind of play his opponents are about to spring, and he steps in to smear them.

Last Friday, for example, GW was playing Richmond's John Marshall High at Alexandria. Phillips, 6-foot 2-inch, 198-pounder was backing up the line for GW.

Four times he smelled out Marshall's play ahead of time and roared in from the secondary to drop the pitchout receiver for large losses.

He seemed to have the pass plays doped out, too. He knocked down five passes altogether, and three of those came in succession.

His ability to diagnose the play gets him at the right spot at the right time.—WEST McLEAN.

Big Team Plays Big Game in Big Town

By Red Smith

NOTRE DAME, IND., Nov. 9 (NYHT)—The football players had finished their calisthenics—one set for the linemen, to develop neck and shoulder muscles, a different set for the backs, who need to be loose and swift—and they had slapped one another around in preliminary exercises until the perspiration was flowing, and also a little blood.

Now a squad of offensive specialists gathered in a snug huddle and roared a cheer whose refrain went: "Tar the Tar Heels. Tar the Tar Heels." On another tract of Cartier Field coaches harried linemen through a blocking drill. These fellows worked in small groups, a center and three other linemen charging against an equal number of defensive players. There was the heavy thud of impact, then growls and snorts and the rasp of labored breathing. Could have been a sound track made at a jungle waterhole at midnight.

Smith

Coaches chivvied the players, scolding, correcting encouraging. First the New England accents of Joseph Andrew McArdle: "That's right, feel sorry for yourselves. That's why you've looked so terrible." Then Frank Leahy's milder tones: "That's better, that's the idea. But remember to keep your head up and shorten your stride as soon as you make contact."

"We have discovered," Leahy explained, aside, "that the bigger a man is the sooner he falls on his face when he puts his head down. We ask them to charge high, with their heads up and a shorter stride, so they keep their feet."

The master showed few signs of satisfaction during this drill and a long, fierce defensive scrimmage which followed. But when the work was done he was not glummer than usual.

LEAHY AND HIS staff are preparing Notre Dame for the game with North Carolina in Yankee Stadium Saturday, and for that game only. Elsewhere on the campus and on the streets of South Bend, however, you hear Southern Methodist, Iowa and Southern California mentioned as often as North Carolina. All four opponents are lumped together by those who talk, not so much about a victory next Saturday but rather about the prospects of Notre Dame completing its fourth successive season without defeat.

This frightens the master. He always fears the next opponent. Now, after 34 games without a loss, he also fears the law of averages. Most of all, he fears complacency, which he recognizes as a more dangerous adversary than the Chicago Bears.

Getting ready for the one big game of the New York season, he has not tried to tell his players that twice-beaten North Carolina is the greatest team in football history. He has, of course, told them about the gifts of Charley Justice and the brilliance of Art Weiner, the big North Carolina end who catches Justice's passes.

Mostly, though, his approach has been something like this:

"We are going to New York, the greatest city in the world, where Notre Dame has one of its greatest followings. It is the one big game of the year in the big town. You will be the first Notre Dame team to play there in three years, and New York is looking forward to the game. This isn't the Pantages circuit; this is the Palace. Notre Dame must not be ashamed of you."

As he talked, the band was rehearsing somewhere across the darkening campus. The tune they were playing came faintly: "Give My Regards to Broadway."

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 9—Joseph Culmone, a youth who arrived in this country from his native Italy after the war, stole the jockey honors on the midweek program here today.

The little fellow, set down at Monmouth Park this summer for incompetence, apparently has improved with leaps and bounds for he rode three winners in excellent style.

Culmone's triple included a saddle masterpiece aboard Mrs. Albert Sabath's Missab in the day's feature, the Mad Hatter purse. He brought the filly from last position, sent her around horses and applied the whip vigorously to get her up in concluding strides.

Missab's photo margin was a neck and she hung defeat on Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lucky Ned, the favorite in the field of a half dozen 3-year-olds. Third money went to Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr.'s Roman Way.

Missab, a daughter of Alsab who made Preakness history here, returned an $8.20 win mutuel and was clocked in a creditable 1:11 1/5 over a fast track and under cloudless skies.

Culmone rode his first winner in the second race. This also was a come-from-behind effort aboard Miss Ann Bickley's Wily. The filly whipped, among others, Mrs. M. Kratz's Bo Mowlee, and Cedar Farm's Unaided. Wily paid $30.80 and put the finishing touches on a $91.60 daily double.

He came back in the third race to score with another outsider. D. O. Evans' Dana Del was the winner, the filly downing Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Intrigue, the public choice with Mrs. C. B. Powell's Pamlico third in the field of 11. Dana Del paid $14.40.

Missab, a busy miss, won her fourth race—her first in Maryland—in 23 starts and now had been in the money 14 times, running up close to $15,000 in earnings, the hard way.

Md. Horse Trainer Barred in 'Doping'

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 9 (AP).—The New Jersey Racing Commission today suspended a Maryland trainer after its tests showed that his horse had been given caffein before winning a recent race.

The trainer, C. O. Ferguson, of Mount Airy, was suspended for 60 days effective November 1 on charges that he had "failed to have his horse properly protected before the race."

The groom, John Taylor of Hollywood, Fla., also received a 60-day suspension. The racing commission said the horse, owned by Ferguson's wife, was named Jobie and paid $12.40 to win on October 26 at Garden State Park in Camden.

Leon Hart Lineman of Week

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 9 (AP).—Leon Joseph Hart, cocaptain and right end for Notre Dame, was chosen lineman of the week in the Associated Press poll, based on his performance in Notre Dame's 34-21 triumph over Michigan State last Saturday.

Hart is the biggest player on the Notre Dame squad. He stands six feet four inches and weighs 245 pounds.

Once upon a time the end around play was considered by coaches as a tricky move. But Hart has consistently gained so much ground with the end around play for the Irish that Coach Frank Leahy has made it an integral part of his offensive repertoire.

Hart also is a tower of strength on defense.

Football Runs Longer

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—The average college football game in the East runs 2 hours 26 minutes, about six or eight minutes longer than last year due to the new substitution rule.

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS:

Bed o' Roses. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's star filly, will be wintered at the Sagamore Farm in Maryland. She won the Demoiselle Stakes at Jamaica to bring her year's earnings to just under the $200,000 mark and clinched the 2-year-old filly title. I told you sometime back that she may go in the Kentucky Derby. I became tangled in my stake dates for Pimlico. The Manly Steeplechase tops Thursday's program, the Pimlico Cup is booked for Saturday, while the Riggs Handicap features the closing card November 17. Jack Robertson is leading the riders here with 10 winners. Jockey Eddie Arcaro will ride Blue Hills in the Riggs here after which he will vacation until the opening of Santa Anita. BILL.

Hunting and Fishing Notes

Maryland Small Game Season Opens Nov. 15

By Ralph Murdock

THE HUNTER and angler have plenty to look forward to and the next three weeks should be busy ones. Maryland will be the first State to open the better half of its hunting season and it includes the open season for cottontails, quail, pheasant, turkey, grouse and woodcock. The big date is November 15. It will be the time when local gunners will have their first opportunity to take to the fields with their hunting dogs which they have had in training for several months.

Murdock

SEVERAL DAYS of frost failed to school the big stripers in the bay. Plenty of pan-size rock are still surfacing but most of the anglers we have contacted are more interested in the big ones. The weekend was marred by north-northwest winds and the best catches of rockfish were made along the western shore of the Chesapeake.

Crabs, as far as the bay is concerned, are just about through for this season although several fair catches were made in the lower Potomac River.

THE ANNUAL convention of the National Association of Conservation Education and Publicity was held at Edgewater Park, Miss. It was attended by over 100 persons from 25 States. The conference was highlighted with talks by Michael Hudoba, Washington editor of Sports Afield, and R. W. Eschmeyer, prominent fisheries scientist with the Tennessee Valley Authority.

CHESTER M. ATWOOD, Everett R. Brooks and John A. Clarke were only able to nab 11 rockfish on Tuesday at Herring Bay. They had two stripers that hit the five-pound mark while the other weighed just a pound.

Ed Sheehy and party while fishing off Randall Cliffs had a red letter day when they boated 83 pan-size rock—no big ones. Several good catches of largemouth bass were also made at Piscataway Creek. The largest was a 6-pounder.

Weekend Fishing Suggestions

ROCKFISH—The big rock showed at Bloody Point Tuesday and Wednesday. It's our best bet for the big fellas. Pan-size can be taken from West River area to Point Lookout.

CRAPPIE—Big Point area to Hill Bridge. Minnows and boats obtainable.

WHITE PERCH — Sunderland's landing. Bring your bloodworms with you.

YELLOW PERCH — Severn and South Rivers are producing excellent catches. Minnows can be had at practically all boat houses located in these areas.

Figures Heighten Saturday Duel

Boston U., 3d in Offense, Runs Into Terps, Fourth in Defense

They say you can prove anything by figures—Maryland and Boston U. will have a doubly interesting Fenway Park engagement this Saturday.

The Terps slipped from second to fourth on total defense, according to National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics. So they go up against the Harry Agganis-led Terriers who now are third on total offense.

Notre Dame shows a few good reasons why it's the country's top team. The Irish are tops on total offense, third on rushing offense and fourth on rushing defense.

Terp Passers Get Workout

Coach Jim Tatum had his passers chucking the ball all over the field yesterday as his Maryland football team scrimmaged for more than two hours.

Part of the passing was to sharpen the Old Liners' aerial attack for the Boston University game in Boston Saturday. The other part was to get the Maryland defense set for Boston's tricky passing.

Maryland is given a better than even chance to break Boston's string of victories at six. Tatum has been warning his rugged team, however, that it is in for one of its toughest struggles of the season.

Meanwhile, at Weston, Mass., Coach Buff Donelli, who admits that his undefeated Boston University Terriers have been saving several of their pet plays, today indicated he would shoot the works against strong Maryland at Fenway Park Saturday.

Donelli and his aides plan to devote much time this week to their defensive linemen, who will be called upon to spot the Terps' considerable poundage this weekend.

FAO Director Suggests New Food Program

A United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization official last night declared the world must take three decisive steps to provide sufficient food for more than a billion of its people who are now undernourished.

The proposals were made by Norris E. Dodd, director general of the FAO, who was one of three speakers at a public meeting held in the Jefferson Memorial auditorium of the Department of Agriculture. The panel, presided over by Senator Clinton D. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture, was sponsored by the Chemical Engineers Club of Washington.

For More Technical Aid

Dodd advocated:

1. A "great expansion of the FAO technical assistance program to underdeveloped countries, aided by the development of President Truman's "Point Four" program.

2. Reinforcement of technical assistance for the future through foreign investment in dams, irrigation systems, fertilizer plants and railroads, in the low-income countries.

3. Creation of a clearing house by the FAO to "bridge the currency gap between areas of surplus and areas of need."

Dodd, a former U. S. Undersecretary of Agriculture, explained that the clearing house, a public corporation with substantial capital contributed by participating countries, would buy surplus commodities only.

These would be resold to needy countries for convertible currency or for their own currencies, which would be held by the clearing house until increasing trade could clear the accounts and pay back the producing country.

The clearing-house proposal will be made at an FAO conference to be held here November 21, Dodd said.

Vincent Sauchelli, agricultural research director for the Davison Chemical Corp., Baltimore, said the world can grow sufficient food to feed its people if both science and morality, the heart and the laboratory, are used.

Frank K. Lawler, editor of Food Industries of New York, said the food-processing industry needs more technologists and "engineering minds" and that agricultural "know-how" provided to backward countries must be accompanied by knowledge of processing and storage of food.

Short-Term A-Armistice Gets Backing

Lake Success, Nov. 9 (NYHT).—U. N. Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo made public today his appeal to the Big Five powers and Canada to consider four possible paths to easing United Nations atomic tension. Among them were a "short-term atomic armistice" with inspection controls and a new approach for interim control based on present small, peaceful uses of atomic energy.

With the smaller and middle nations groping to help, Haiti introduced a resolution to have the Assembly declare atomic weapons outlawed and to begin drafting a convention specifying this ban and establishment of controls should take place simultaneously.

The United States, through Assistant Secretary of State John D. Hickerson, told the Assembly's Special Political Committee it believed six-power atomic talks should go on.

Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate, in a formal reply to General Romulo, expressed "the appreciation of my government for the spirit which motivates your appeal" and promised "serious consideration" for his proposals and for all others.

General Romulo suggested attention might be directed along four lines:

1. Possibility of a short-term armistice accompanied by an inspection system.

2. Possibility of an interim prohibition on the use of atomic weapons with adequate safeguards.

3. Possibility of further compromises between the majority and minority plans for atomic energy control.

4. Possibility of a new approach to the fundamental problem of control.

A number of scientists have contended that a new approach can be found in a realistic assessment of the present requirements of atomic energy for peaceful purposes," Romulo said.

"It has been argued that, in the present and immediately foreseeable state of science, the amount of fissionable materials which could be used for peaceful purposes is so small that the problem of controlling the use of such materials for military purposes may be relatively easier than had previously been envisaged," he added.

Restaurant Loses Liquor Sale License

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday revoked the Class C license of the Southland Restaurant, 628 4th st. sw. after testimony that the establishment's principal source of revenue was not from the sale of food, as required by law.

The revocation is secheduled to take effect November 22.

According to ABC Chairman Alan Payne, it was brought out at a hearing Tuesday that eight inspectors had checked cash registers at the Southland for 15 days during September and found the bulk of business was in the beverage line.

In a second action yesterday, the board took under advisement the case of the P. J. Cook Wine and Liquor Store at 3214 M st. nw, where, it was testified by four Seventh Precinct policemen, a sale was made to an intoxicated person September 20. The store manager declared the purchaser had not appeared to be under the influence of liquor.

Hearing Set On Area Milk Price Order

By The Associated Press

The Agriculture Department will hold a public hearing here November 28 on a proposed Federal order to regulate the handling of milk in the Washington area.

The order would establish minimum prices to be paid to dairy farmers regularly supplying the market. It would not set retail prices.

The hearing was requested by the Washington and Virginia Producers Association, which is said to represent a majority of the dairy farmers supplying the market.

A previous Federal order for the Washington market was terminated April 1, 1947, at the request of a majority of dairy farmers supplying the area.

Lieut. Doherty, Marine Flier, Dies Near Hawaii

Mrs. Daniel A. Doherty, sr., 2929 Connecticut ave. nw., yesterday was notified that her only son, First Lieut. A. Doherty, Marine flier, had been killed in a crash during operations over the Pacific near Hawaii. With Lieutenant Doherty died M/Sergt. William Joseph Losleden of El Toro Marine Base, Calif., to which the officer was attached.

According to the United Press, the accident occurred during a mock strafing raid 216 miles north of Hilo as the training fleet was proceeding toward the mainland.

Lieutenant Doherty formerly lived in Washington. He entered the Marine Corps in 1940 and saw extended war service. In his boyhood he attended District schools. His father was the late Commander Doherty, USN. Besides his mother he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jeannie C. Doherty and a son, Daniel A. jr.

Funeral services will be held Monday at El Toro.

Continues Scolding Later

Angry Mrs. Roosevelt Chides Ukrainian on Floor of U. N.

Lake Success, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt gave a severe tongue-lashing today to a Soviet Ukrainian delegate for charging the Western Powers were training displaced persons to fight Russia.

The former First Lady, ordinarily a picture of polite calm in United Nations debates, told Ukrainian Delegate Ivan P. Demtchenko that nothing he could have said would have done more harm to American public opinion in regard to Russia.

After repudiating his charges as "outrageous" in a formal speech, Mrs. Roosevelt approached Demtchenko personally after adjournment to continue her scolding.

The issue arose during debate in the General Assembly's Social Committee on the refugee problem.

The Ukrainian renewed familiar Soviet charges the West was barring the return of DP's to their homelands and was training war criminals and Quislings as part of their anti-Soviet war preparations.

Mrs. Roosevelt, flushed and tense, denied the charge of Western war preparations.

"I assure these delegates," she said, "that there is no preparation . . . among the people of the United States for war with anyone and I am quite sure that, this being a democracy, it would take a great deal of provocation—and we had an example of it today—to get the people of the United States to allow their Government to change their policies . . .

"I hope that we will not hear any more of the type of thing which I do really think is an incentive or an incitement to the very feelings that the delegates deplore.

"We are constantly told that there should be no incitement to war. Well, I can assure you that you could have done nothing more harmful than in your speech today, sir.

"You could have done nothing that could have done more harm to public opinion in our country, to have hurt the ability of those who want friendship to find friendship."

Speaking to Demtchenko through an interpreter after the meeting adjourned, Mrs. Roosevelt told him:

"Nothing could have been more harmful to friendly relations between our two countries than your speech today, sir . . . You've just got to understand that there are many Latvians, Estonians, Lithuanians and Ukrainians who do not want to return to their countries. I wish we could all get over this fear of each other."

Nursing Institute Denies Charge of False Advertising

Officers of the National Institute of Practical Nursing, 909 G pl nw., yesterday filed an answer to a Federal Trade Commission complaint defending themselves against charges of false advertising.

In their answer, the officers, Edward Williams, president and Lilian J. Williams, secretary, asserted that "every statement or representation made by them is true and founded in fact."

The Institute officers contend that their diplomas are recognized; that their graduates are recognized by Georgetown Hospital, and that Georgetown and other hospitals have employed their graduates; that 90 per cent of the school's graduates plan to serve in the District, where there is no license requirement for practical nurses.

Hearings on the charges will be held "in due course," FTC announced, in publishing the Institute's answer.

Agencies Get Rules Today On Permanent Status for Temporary U. S. Workers

Regulations for the blanketing into permanent jobs of upward of 10,000 war service and temporary employes will be sent to the agencies today by the Civil Service Commission. These are among their important provisions:

That an eligible employe who has passed a competitive examination for a probational appointment that is comparable to the position he now holds will not be required to take a new test;

That an eligible employe who has passed no appropriate test will be given a noncompetitive examination by Civil Service. This may be a written test. For most middle and higher bracket employes, however, a written examination won't be required, as they will be rated on experience and training.

The first step in the process is the recommendation to Civil Service by the agencies of their eligible employes for status. All such recommendations must be made on or before September 30, 1950, a year from the date of the President's covering-in order. The effective date of each job shift from temporary to regular status will be fixed by the various agencies.

Civil Service will check each recommendation for status. It will decide whether information supplied by the agencies on individual employes meets its job standards. The commission retains the right to reject agency requests for status when employes fail to measure up.

To be eligible for status under the order, employes must have been on active duty in a competitive position on September 30, 1949. It also covers employes who were: on leave without pay for educational purposes; on sick leave after all sick leave had been used (maternity leave included); on the compensation rolls of the Bureau of Employes' Compensation; on active military service but having statutory or regulatory restoration rights, or for any purpose for 30 days or less.

In the above cases, it isn't necessary for an employe to return to duty before his agency can recommend him for status.

In addition, continuous service that is creditable for retirement is required between March 16, 1942, and September 30, 1949. Intervening military service, of course, is counted as "continuous service." Furthermore, "continuous service" may include periods of absence on annual or sick leave, furlough, leave-without-pay, and time on the rolls of the Bureau of Employes' Compensation as a result of injuries in line of duty.

This "continuous service" provision may also include one or more breaks in service that total less than 30 calendar days, and one or more layoffs due to reductions of force of not more than one year each between the date of appointment and September 30.

The efficiency rating of an otherwise eligible employe must have been "good" or better on September 30. If he wasn't under a rating system, a certificate stating that he served with merit during the past six months is required. A complete record of service in the judicial or legislative branches, or temporary service, between March 16, 1942, and September 30, 1949, is also a requirement.

The agencies must also forward a completed application for Federal employment, standard form 57 or 60, for each employe recommended for status.

The commission advises employes who seek further information on these instructions to consult their own personnel offices. It can't act until after agency recommendations are made.

SHOWDOWN: A special convention of AFL's East Coast Metal Trades Council will be held Monday in the Annapolis Hotel. Delegates have been asked to bring facts on specific instances where naval personnel are assigned to work that should be done by civilians, and where work assigned to the naval installations is being contracted out to private firms.

The data will be turned over to Defense Secretary Johnson, who has promised to investigate. The council met here last month with the Secretary, at which time complaints were made. The Secretary requested supporting evidence. The delegates plan to give it to him. The Naval Gun Factory and other naval activities here and nearby will be represented at the convention.

Fifth Group Of Firemen Cited in Fund Investigation

Local No. 36 $150 In Hole, Probers Think; $5000 Cash Discovered in Safe

The name of a fifth District firemen's benefit group—Firefighters Local No. 36, AFL, late yesterday was added to the four already under probe in alleged fund shortages.

This was announced at the conclusion of the first day's investigation of the affair by a three-man board convened by order of Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew.

A spokesman for the group said the suspected shortage in the accounts of the AFL unit would not run above $150, in contrast to total figures of between $7000 and $7500 for the other four groups said to have been revealed by successive audits.

The other four organizations are the Firemen's Retirement Club, the Firemen's Relief Association, the Firemen's Family Relief and the No. 3 Engine Company Christmas Club.

Deputy Chief P. A. Davis is chairman of the board, and the members are Deputy Chief M. H. Sutton and Battalion Chief C. P. Pool.

Meeting at 9 a.m. yesterday they set up machinery for the probe and announced they would question the presidents, treasurers, secretaries and other officers of the benefit groups.

The first two appearing before the board were Pvt. Stanley Horan, president, Firemen's Family Relief, attached to the repair shop of the department, and Capt. L. F. Price, Truck Company No 2, president of the AFL local.

The board sessions will continue today and Friday, at least. Members believe they can complete interrogation of officers and start going over the books of the organizations by Monday. A report of findings and recommendations will be forwarded to Corporation Counsel Vernon West at the earliest possible date.

$5000 in Cash Discovered

It was not stated when Pvt. J. A. McCarthy, No. 5 Engine Co., who has general custody of the funds of all the benefit groups, aggregating about half a million dollars, would be called before the board.

Chief Mayhew has asserted that laxity marked the handling of the finances of the organizations. He added that $5000 cash had been discovered in the No. 3 Engine Co. safe where McCarthy kept the books.

At the same time Mayhew said McCarthy, 52 years old and a 24-year veteran of the department, is "very thrifty and clean as a pin," possessing "no bad habits."

Scottish Pastor To Be Called Here

Mrs. Matthews Sworn in as Federal Judge

Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, 54, took the oath of office yesterday as an associate judge of District Court.

The first woman to be a Federal judge in the District, Mrs. Matthews was sworn in by Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws, with numerous well-wishers, a large percentage women, present in the court.

Her judicial robe was placed on her by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, legislative consultant for the General Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. Wiley said many of the clubs' members "assisted in creating the necessary atmosphere for the appointment of Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews.

"I take pleasure in placing this robe, a badge of her office, around her shoulders, with the hope that in the years to come it will always remind her of the confidence and trust of the women of the country and this thought will give her courage for the great tasks ahead," she said.

Present in the court was Mrs. India Edwards, Democratic Party official who reportedly was largely responsible for the appointment of a woman judge here. Also in attendance were Mrs. Matthews' two brothers, Edwin Shelton, a lawyer and John L. Shelton, a real estate man.

Judge Matthews will begin court sessions Thursday and in doing so will temporarily evict Chief Judge Laws, whose courtroom she is to use for a few days. He will use a conference rom at the Department of Justice perhaps until a courtroom at the United States Tax Court is made available

Business II Chest Section Tops 38%

1035 Donations For $20,496 Total Reported; Pepco Official Speaks

The Business II section of the Community Chest drive yesterday reported collection of 1035 donations for $20,496, raising the unit's total to $94,214, or 38.97 percent of the quota.

Principal speaker at the Business II luncheon at the Washington Hotel was Robert W. Wilson, assistant to the president of the Potomac Electric Power Co. He said Community Chest contributions should properly be regarded as one of the normal costs of doing business.

"Your business can't be any better than the community in which you do business and we all know it is good business to build character and strengthen the life of our city," Wilson declared.

Today the Business I, Government and Residential units will hold individual report luncheons at the Washington Hotel at 12:20 p. m.

At yesterday's meeting, announcement was made that 56 additional local organizations have been cited for the Red Feather honor roll. The groups are:

8 Arrested In Gambling Roundup

All of Those Taken In Montgomery Raids Described As 'Small Time'

Eight persons were arrested during a day-and-night campaign Tuesday against gambling in Montgomery County, it was disclosed yesterday.

Lieut. G. W. Linthicum, county detective chief, explained that news of the arrests was held up so that the drive could be completed in secrecy. He attached no significance to the fact that the arrests occurred during the trial of several alleged gamblers in the District.

The arrests simply culminated an investigation covering several weeks, Linthicum said. He described all of the persons taken into custody as "small time" figures.

Almost a year ago to the day a similar series of arrests netted 15 persons last November.

Those Arrested

Louis T. Bussard, 41, bakery truck driver of 3014 R st. nw., and Ida Bassin, 33, of River rd., Bethesda, operator of a tavern on Rockville pike near Garrett Park, charged with setting up a gaming table; Edmond McNeil, 36, a shoe shine boy of 626 Park rd. nw., and table; Edmond McNeil, 36, a shoemaker employed at 953 Bonifant st., Silver Spring, charged with setting up a gaming table and playing a game of chance for money.

Cabbie Faces Extra Charge

Cab driver Robert N. Houchins, 24, of 8801 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, charged with possession of numbers slips and exceeding 25 miles an hour.

Waters and McNeil were released under $2000 bond and the others were placed under bonds of $1000.

Houchins, Waters and McNeil are to appear at Silver Spring Police Court on November 22, with the five others scheduled for hearing the following day in Rockville Police Court.

Barman Gets 30 Days For Selling Numbers

Broadus G. Shreve, 42, former Arlington bartender, was sentenced to 30 days in jail plus a $50 fine in Arlington County Court yesterday, after he pleaded guilty to selling numbers bets. A second similar charge was nolle prossed.

Shreve of 3109 N. 9th st., Arlington, was arrested in a raid October 17 at the Cherrydale Grille, 4032 Lee Highway, Arlington.

Youth 'Who Had Everything To Live for' Takes His Life

Richard B. Onslow, 17-year-old top flight Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School athlete and scholar, died early yesterday after shooting himself Tuesday between the eyes with a rifle given to him by his parents.

The youth, "who had everything to live for," in the words of his father, Richard Walton Onslow, public relations consultant, left a note to his parents indicating he was "very upset about life in general."

Broken Romance

The contents of Richard's note to his parents were not disclosed, but several school friends said he had been disturbed since a break-up with a girl friend of two years' standing. The girl, a tall, slender blonde, dated regularly with Richard during her last two years at Bethesda-Chevy Chase. She was graduated last June and started attending University of Maryland.

One pal said Richard had spotted her in the grandstands with another youth during one of the football games in which he was playing. A varsity player for two seasons, Richard was considered a star quarterback.

The principal of the high school, William G. Pyles, said Richard was a "top lad all the way along the line." He attained good grades, was active in scholastic organizations and was "outstanding as a student and a citizen."

Henry Turner, editor of the Tattler, school paper, on which Richard was managing editor, said Richard was a "popular, handsome redhead." He said the broken romance "hit him pretty hard. He had gone with her two years."

"Rickey," as he was known by most of his friends, was found in his upstairs bedroom at the family residence, 4706 Hunt ave., Chevy Chase, by his 13-year-old brother, Vincent, Tuesday about 11 p. m. He was lying face down on the floor over his .22-caliber rifle. His parents gave it to him last Christmas after he showed interest in target shooting.

Both Onslow boys had been baby-sitting for neighbors, but Richard came home an hour earlier. Vincent ran back to the neighbors' house and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad was summoned.

The Onslows, who had been visiting friends to discuss the University of Virginia as a college where "Rickey" might go after graduation from high school in June, arrived shortly after the squad.

Transfusions Given

The youth was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, and blood transfusions were made, but he died at 4:35 a. m. Both parents were present.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide yesterday. Police believe Richard sat on the edge of his bed, placing the butt of the rifle on the floor so he could reach forward and pull the trigger.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 11 a. m. at St. Albans Church with members of Richard's football team acting as pallbearers. A scheduled game with Rockville High School was moved to today so his fellow players could participate in the funeral.

Surviving, besides his parents and his brother, Vincent, are two sisters, Deborah, 9, and Victoria, 5. His father is a former reporter for The Washington Post and former public relations director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Hains Point Cherry Trees Repeat Show

It's not just the balmy weather of the past few days that has made the cherry trees on Hains Point burst out into blossom, though the warm sun has helped.

And it's not those synthetic plant hormones sprayed around by National Capital Parks plant experts last spring to preserve the blossoms for the Cherry Blossom Festival.

It's nature.

The blooming things out on the point happen to be a variety that comes out pink all over in the fall as well as in the spring, Chief of Horticulture George W. Harding of National Capital Parks patiently explained yesterday.

"Every year, it's a great surprise," said Harding, who every year is not surprised.

Horace Wester, NCP plant pathologist, added the information that not only is it an autumn-blooming variety that is showing off at this time, along the river, but it is even named Autunnalis, which should be a clincher. To the Japanese, it's the Jugatsu-Zakura type.

About 100 of this variety are scattered about in East Potomac Park, Harding said.

Anyway, it was a nice day yesterday, with a high of 71 degrees, and today the Weather Bureau expects another of the same, with about 72 degrees maximum. Warmest day so far this week was Tuesday, when the mercury reached 74. A low of about 44 degrees is expected early this morning.

Alexandria Man Fatally Injured by Hit-Run Car

Alert Bus Driver Averts Crash When His Brakes Fail on Wisconsin Ave.

William H. Brown, about 50, of 16 E. Howell ave., Alexandria, died in Alexandria Hospital at 10:35 p. m. yesterday from injuries suffered a few minutes before when he was struck by a hit-run motorist.

Brown, an engineer with the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, was struck down at Commonwealth ave. and Forrest st., police said. He sustained a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was on his way to work when the accident occurred.

Police has broadcast a lookout for a two-door 1946 Mercury sedan carrying a broken right front headlight.

Driver Averts Crash

Earlier in Washington an alert Capital Transit bus driver yesterday ran his heavy vehicle, bearing 45 passengers, onto the sidewalk to avoid crashing into a line of autos as his brakes failed approaching a traffic light at Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw.

The driver, Tudor U. Heeter, jr., 49, of 4616 Highland ave., Bethesda, Md., saw a line of cars immediately ahead as the bus continued south on Wisconsin ave., nw., despite pressure on the brakes. He swerved his vehicle west to the sidewalk where he tried to maneuver it through a 10-foot space between a light pole and a fireplug.

Pole Knocked Flat

The bus finally came to rest against a retaining wall surrounding Immaculata Junior College, 4344 Wisconsin ave. nw.

No one was injured and Heeter, a veteran of 26 years with Capital Transit, received a round of congratulations from his relieved passengers.

In another accident, an Emergency Hospital physician suffered possible internal injuries when the ambulance in which she was riding collided with an auto at 20th and E sts. nw. at 1 p. m.

Patient Not Injured

The physician, Dr. Lunetta Memming, 23, was removed to Emergency Hospital in a District Health Department ambulance where she was admitted for treatment.

A patient in the Emergency Hospital ambulance, which was driven by Frederick W. Smith, 28, of 20 Defrees st. nw., was unhurt.

Driver of the other vehicle was Lemuel J. Embrey, 46, of 647 22d st., Arlington, Va.

One Killed, Three Hurt When Auto Hits Pole

A District man was killed and three other Washingtonians were injured yesterday when the auto in which they were riding crashed into a pole on the Washington blvd. near the Patapsco River.

The dead man is Cyrus James, 20, of 58 H st. nw. Injured were Lucille Kildrick, 27, of 2107 Maryland ave. ne., cuts and bruises; Clyde Ware, 28, of 66 Defrees st. ne., arm and leg fractures and cuts; Loretta Izzard, 43, of 70 Defrees st. ne., fracture of arms, legs and internal injuries.

Baltimore County police said the driver, whose identity is known, disappeared after the accident.

The body of Mrs. Grisella Huber, 40, of 615 Lycoming st., Silver Spring, was found hanging from a clothesline in the garage of her home by one of her three sons when the boy returned from school at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, signed a certificate of suicide. He told reporters Mrs. Huber had left a note stating where her body would be found.

New Faces on the Bench

Bazelon Is Youngest U.S. Appeals Court Judge in Nation

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter
(Fourth of a Series)

Let us say, and be done with it, that the rise of David L. Bazelon has been what is called "meteoric."

Time Magazine, which knows a meteoric rise when it sees one, described Bazelon as "a New Dealing lawyer who had given up a $50,000-a-year law practice to work for the Government." He was 36 then.

Now, at 40, Bazelon becomes the youngest Federal Court of Appeals judge in the Nation.

It was in Chicago that Bazelon said goodby to his practice to come to Washington as an Assistant Attorney General, where they pay a paltry $10,000. This being a cynical world, the shift has given him an amount of trouble ever since. People want to know why he did it.

"Not a Poor Man"

"A total of 47,000 persons have asked me that question," observed Bazelon, in the expansive office where autographed pictures of President Truman, Tom Clark, J. Edgar Hoover and Senator Scott Lucas looked down from the walls.

He did it, he went on to say, because he wanted to prove that an iron-ore-country boy who shined shoes and sold papers at the age of 9 to help support his family could make that kind of money; he had proved it, and that was that. He had stowed away enough of it so he can say today: "I am not a poor man."

So in 1946 to Washington. "Public service offers something private doesn't," he says, also admitting to a bit of a yen to see his name in lights, be in on the policy-making level of Government.

"Do you know," he said, swivelling in his chair, "I am the only man from Chicago in a Cabinet or sub-Cabinet post?"

Used to Sell Papers

Now Bazelon likes to look at the picture of his neatly dressed 8-year-old son Jimmie by his desk and reflect when he was about his son's age he was selling papers. When he took Jimmie t osee a bill game last summer they sat near the President.

This, by the way, was not a fact that particularly impressed the Bazelon heir, who was much more interested in the ball game. But when they got home he asked his father: "Is the President a great man?"

Yes, Bazelon said, he is, a very great man.

"Is it a big job, being President?" Jimmie, a bit unconvinced, persisted.

Yes, said Bazelon, it is a very big job, a very great office.

"Well, Daddy, are you a great man?" Jimmie asked.

Former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, writing in the New Republic, called his appointment to the bench "deplorable."

"When the Supreme Court had to make a forced landing so that Tom C. Clark might step aboard," Ickes wrote, "I took comfort in the thought that every future appointment to the Federal courts would represent an upturn from that all-time low."

Bazelon's appointment, Ickes indicated, has removed this solace. He added: "Certainly the Senate would do well to investigate closely Bazelon's conduct of the Office of Alien Property."

Youngest of Nine Children

Bazelon was born in Superior, Wis., the youngest of nine children—all still living. His father, who ran a small general store in the iron-ore town, died when David L. was 2 and his oldest sister, 21, leaving nothing.

The early twenties found the family living in rather unroaring fashion on Chicago's North Side, and David Bazelon working as a movie usher, a department store clerk, then attending the University of Illinois and Northwestern. He got his law degree at the latter school in 1932 and marched straight out into the dank depths of the depression.

After a couple of years' private practice he became one of the men who got Al Capone and other eminences of Chicago's gangland on income tax charges.

This was as assistant U. S. attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, in charge of Federal tax matters, a job Bazelon took on in 1935. It included handling the civil tax cases that arose out of the spectacular gangland criminal prosecutions.

With five years extremely valuable tax experience, Bazelon joined the Chicago firm of Gottlieb and Schwartz in 1940 as junior partner. Typically, in a couple of years he had risen to a senior partnership in a firm of 32 lawyers and only five senior partners—of which also typically he was by a long shot the youngest.

Taking a high spring back into Government in 1946, Bazelon served as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the lands division. Then he became the first Assistant Attorney General put in charge of the Office of Alien Property when it was transferred to the Department of Justice in 1947.

As Alien Property Custodian, Bazelon has been in charge of enemy properties seized in this country. Overseeing the running of numerous fat-size corporations, handling the selling of millions of dollars of very valuable property:

"I am probably in a sense one of the largest businessmen in the country. On top of that I'm my own lawyer."

Office Runs 230 Companies

The vast litigation arising out of the enemy property seizure is also handled by the office, there being thousands of cases at any given time.

At the moment there are 230 companies under the office, with a total valuation of 290 million dollars in tangible assets alone—the patents owned by the companies far exceed this sum in value, Bazelon says.

His office has sold 41 companies with a valuation of $53,500,000, liquidated 148 companies and returned 14 others, the latter two groups representing a 57 million dollar valuation.

Under Bazelon's tenure, an estimated 6000 patents, mostly German, have been made available to American industry generally, a program which Bazelon considers of top-drawer importance in breaking German cartels.

Married in 1936

Bazelon is a Democrat. He is a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and of the Jewish Community Center.

He was married in 1936, having met his wife, Miriam, on the beach in front of the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago. They have one other son, Richard (Rickey), 6, and live at 4704 Linnean ave. nw., the home where Frank Knox used to live. There is also a French poodle named Waddy in the family.

Truman's Sympathy Sent Reed's Family

Parsons, Kans., Nov. 9. (AP).—President Truman joined political and business leaders today in extending sympathy to the family of Senator Clyde M. Reed, who died unexpectedly at his home here.

The President said he was shocked and saddened by the death last night of the 78-year-old Republican Senator and publisher of the Parsons Sun.

Even as plans were made for the funeral Friday, speculation arose over a possible successor. The appointment will be made by Gov. Frank Carlson, who was expected to be in no hurry to fill the vacancy.

Collapsed in Home

Carlson, frequently mentioned as a likely candidate for the senatorial nomination in the 1950 primary, expressed grief and shock at Reed's death, but he gave no hint on when he will act.

Most political observers in Topeka, the State capital, were inclined to discount the possibility the Governor might resign to clear the way for his own appointment to the Senate.

Reed was elected to the Senate in 1938 and reelected in 1944. His second term expires January 3, 1951.

The senior Senator from Kansas collapsed while decending a stairway at his home. Death was attributed to a heart attack. He had left a hospital here last week after being treated for influenza.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Friday at the first Presbyterian Church.

In Washington, where flags on the Capitol were at half staff, Vice President Barkley named a committee of 12 Senators to attend the services.

The House sergeant at arms, Joseph C. Callahan, appointed all six Kansas Representatives in Congress to represent the House at the funeral.

Court Blocks Move of Pelley Toward Parole

William Dudley Pelley, 59, former leader of the Silver Shirts, suffered a setback yesterday in his fight for parole from an Indiana Federal reformatory where is is serving a 15-year term for sedition.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court quashed subpenas to force the members of the Federal Parole Board to tell the court why Pelley has been denied his parole.

Pelley, who has been a model prisoner, according to his attorney T. Emmett McKenzie, became eligible for release in 1947. McKenzie said that parole board members told him they fear the sting of newspaper columnists and political repercussions from Communists should they release Pelley.

Judge Schweinhaut, meanwhile, disqualified himself from hearing Pelley's mandamus action and also a Government motion to dismiss it. Schweinhaut was one of Pelley's prosecutors during the sedition trial.

Colonel Miller had been in private law practice here since 1920, except for his service with the Labor Board in 1933 and 1934 and his Army service, which began in 1942 and ended four years later.

He was a member of the firm of Miller, Sher and Oppenheimer.

Colonel Miller was a veteran of both World Wars. He enlisted as a private in the Army in 1917 after four years of law practice in Lexington, Ky., where he was born.

Served as Crowder's Aide

After serving with 38th Division Headquarters, he was commissioned and became aide de camp to the then provost marshal general, Maj. Gen. E. H. Crowder, and later was appointed a judge advocate.

He left the Army with the rank of Major to become assistant solicitor of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in 1919-20. In the latter year, he was a special representative of the U. S. Government for the Nicaraguan presidential elections.

After 13 years of private practice here, Colonel Miller was appointed executive director of the National Labor Board, set up as part of the National Recovery Administration under the chairmanship of Robert F. Wagner He refused to accept compensation for the job.

Resigning the following year, he resumed his law practice. When he went back into the Army in 1942, with the rank of colonel, he became associate director of the School of Military Government which was established in Charlottesville, Va.

Won Legion of Merit

He later was appointed director of the military government division, Office of the Provost Marshal General. He was awarded the Legion of Merit, which he declined.

Colonel Miller was a member of the American Bar Association and Delta Chi fraternity. He was also a member of the Army and Navy Club here, the Woodmont Country Club, Bethesda, Md., and the Loudoun Golf and Country Club of Purcellville, Va.

With General Crowder, he was the author of "The Spirit of Selective Service," and he also wrote several articles on Federal taxation and labor relations.

A graduate of the University of Kentucky, he received his A.B., M.A. and LL.B. degrees there.

He is survived by his wife, the former Florence B. Glaser; a son, Jesse I. Miller, of the Chevy Chase address, and a daughter, Mrs. Mandell J. Ourisman, of 7001 Rived rd., Bethesda, Md.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Following Nervous Breakdown, Mother Won't Send Daughter, 18, to College and Develops Harsh Accusatory Manner Toward Her; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18, a high school graduate, and I wanted to go to college this fall but my mother forbade it, although she could well afford it.

She said there was no sense going to college when I probably would just end up getting married, but as I don't even have a steady boy friend, there was no cause for her to think that. What she did do was to send me to a local business school, so that I am home nights.

My problem is how to understand mother. She had a nervous breakdown about a year ago and because of her illness the whole family considered her feelings and my father changed many of his activities to be with her and take her places to make her happy. They traveled a lot this summer and she appears to be quite recovered, except for not remembering things at times.

Used to Express Normal Affection

HOWEVER, since her last trip she treats me like a stranger, and no longer carries on a normal exchange with me. We used to be as close as the average mother and daughter, but now she is always saying mean things. She speaks curtly, never kindly, in asking my help around the house, and she makes remarks about boys I date. To avoid trouble I told one boy I wouldn't be seeing him any more—after she had snapped at me (without explanation) either to go with him steady or not at all.

Last week she asked me out of a clear sky what was the idea of saying she never did anything for me. I said I didn't know what she was talking about and she called me a liar. I was shocked and hurt, as she had never spoken to me that way before. I went to my room and cried until I felt really ill; and I've never said a word to anyone about how things are at home.

I feel I can't go on living this way because I am so miserable most of the time. I keep to my room a lot to avoid being hurt and I have thought of leaving home, but if I do, she won't pay for my schooling, I am sure. Can you please advise me what to do? I can't talk to my father because he has been worried enough and I don't want to add to his troubles. N. E.

Mother's Mind Sorely Confused

DEAR N. E.: Your mother's belligerent question, "What's the idea of saying I never did anything for you?" suggests two things: (1) That she is talking back to her own accusatory conscience, which probably scolds her for refusing to send you to college. (2) That she is also grappling verbally with a thankless attitude you've adopted since the wrangle about college started.

In brief, it appears that she has been "hearing herself think," guiltily, about her disobliging exercise of power over you; and also feeling, irritably, the impact of your ingrate (or sulky) acceptance of the business schooling she has provided,—and that she has been getting her private reflections confused with conversational exchange, so that she hardly knows which is which.

That kind of mental mix-up isn't uncommon to persons who are emotionally disturbed—as she has been and is——to a degree that clouds their memory. And since you aren't a physician trained in probing the meaning of such behavior, it is hardly possible that you could make sense of your mother's performance nowadays.

Sane Flexibility Life's Best Buffer

HOWEVER, you can understand that she "isn't herself" (as the saying goes), and hasn't been since her breakdown last year, and that her unfriendly manner and caustic language, though a trial to patience, aren't to be taken literally, but rather recognized as symptoms of neurotic travail within herself.

Being at odds with her life, angrily anxious about her failure to achieve idyllic goals conceived in adolescence,—a state of feeling into which many immature minds fall dejectedly in middle age,—it follows that she is involuntarily hostile to intimates too, and has been making all sorts of "injured" demands on your father recently. And since youth tends to be happy despite most difficulties, whereas "misery loves company," doubtless that's why she makes quarrel with you, if you show signs of enjoying yourself.

At your immature age, you are old enough to face the situation rationally, with some maturity, i. e., resourcefully, without self pity; and young enough to accommodate flexibly to circumstances. So dry your tears; cultivate calm compassion on the appropriate reaction to your mother's sickness; don't treat her whims as gospel; and—this is important—take your troubles to your father. I'm sure he'd much rather talk things over than have you sulking peculiarly too, and a private exchange about your mutual problem should be a relief to both of you. M. H.

Advisers Hear O'Connor

Polio Fund Lack Called 'Critical'

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE NATIONAL FOUNDATION for Infantile Paralysis is in critical financial straits. In its present dollarless condition, it cannot function another year. So warned Basil O'Connor, national president, in an address last night at the fifth annual conference of State Advisers on Women's Activities at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Seated beside Mr. O'Connor as a silent witness for the polio fund was Actress Helen Hayes. Her daughter, Mary MacArthur, died of a sudden attack of infantile paralysis on September 22, at the outset of a stage career following in her famous mother's footsteps.

First Public Appearance

MISS HAYES, who has long been a volunteer worker for the Foundation in its previous drives, was on this occasion making her first public appearance since her daughter's death. She was dressed simply in a grey satin dinner dress with a matching hat.

Mr. O'Connor, speaking at a dinner meeting which was the high spot of the current four-day conclave, told women club representatives and advisers that the Foundation's financial crisis exists now despite the fact that there is more hope for a solution to the polio menace than ever before.

Bringing up the threat of a "welfare state" as the only alternative to private support of infantile paralysis research and therapy, Mr. O'Connor said that volunteer contributions to such funds as the March o' Dimes is "the American way."

Mr. O'Connor pointed out that the foundation's 12-year fight against infantile paralysis can be wiped out within a few months unless the 1950 March of Dimes is overwhelmingly successful. Cost of the 1949 polio epidemics created the present monetary crisis, he said.

According to an estimate presented by the foundation head, over 40,000 people of all ages will have been stricken with polio before 1949 ends. Care of these patients will cost 31 million dollars, more than was raised in last year's March of Dimes.

Need Money For Research

FIVE TIMES as much money is now spent on patient care as on research and professional education, Mr. O'Connor explained adding: "It is in research that we seek the answer to the prevention and control of infantile paralysis."

"We are told that within our lifetime we will find a means to control infantile paralysis," he said. But, he added, this goal cannot be reached without funds.

During a luncheon speech yesterday Miss Jennie Campbell, president of the International Childhood Education Association, called upon the women of the Nation to seek legislation for teachers to instruct hospitalized children.

Upon women's shoulders she placed the responsibility for seeing that hospitals have qualified teachers for young patients.

Miss Campbell said that hospitalized children should be taught in groups rather than tutored individually. She advocated that regular hours be set aside for group instruction. Classes could be held in the afternoons or early evenings, she suggested.

APPEARING in public for the first time since her daughter's death from polio in September, Miss Helen Hayes, famed American actress, was a guest of honor at the dinner meeting of the fifth annual conference of State Advisers on Women's Activities at the Wardman Park Hotel last night. She is shown here in informal conversation with Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Children Need Outside Influence

FEELING that hospital environment lacks suitable stimulation to learning, she advised teachers to bring in outside materials to stimulate the child's curiosity.

The four-day conference will close today after a luncheon, at which the foundation's executive director will preside. Spotlighted earlier will be reports on research by Dr. Jonas E. Salk, University of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Harry M. Weaver, National Foundation director of research.

Plan Shoppers Lunch

The Women's Society of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., will hold a bazaar on Thursday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. and on Thursday from noon through the dinner hour. A shoppers' luncheon will be served from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. on Wednesday and a turkey dinner from 5 to 7 p. m. Thursday.

Entertaining in Georgetown

Col. and Mrs. Jess Bryan Bennett are entertaining today at cocktails for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Braniff. The party will be given at their house in Georgetown from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Tulle Lumberjackets? Oh, My!

Paris, Nov. 9 (AP).—Lumberjackets, in every sort of material from tulle to fleecy wool and suitable for all occasions from ball games to elegant soirees, dominated Jacques Fath's midseason fashion show today.

Fath also showed large, face-framing, white starched pique and glazed linen collars; new halter-necked bodices, lots of extremely tight, straight skirts and, unlike other designers, many full-length evening dresses.

All the lumber jackets he shows are casual looking affairs, cut along the same lines as a man's shirt, but the collars and cuffs are very wide and stiffened. He uses French seams throughout and ropes all fullness tightly into the waist with black patent leather belts.

They all have buttons and buttonholes set down the front from top to bottom, but these are evidently just decoration.

Canned Foods Are Budget-Stretchers

The housewife who receives her house money in monthly or semi-monthly amounts is very wise to stock up on pay day in canned goods, such as soups, canned fish, meat and hearty vegetables. Then if the money is low the last few days these canned articles may be brought forth and prove a blessing to the depleted budget. Avoid canned foods the early days of the budget so they may be saved until the later ones.

Allow for Shrinkage

When making cotton curtains, it is wise to allow about one inch extra to each yard of goods in case of shrinkage. This extra may be doubled over at the heading where it will not be noticed and yet be there when needed.

Ask Anne About Decorating Child's Room

We have moved into a Cape Cod type house and I want to decorate my 12-year-old daughter's room. The walls are light green, the ceiling white. There are two windows, one a dormer. She has Hollywood twin beds with off-white leatherette headboards, an unpainted chest and bookcase, and a white wicker rocker that needs paint. We plan to buy an unpainted dressing table and bench and throw rugs. I want to make either curtains or drapes, vanity skirt and spreads. H. C. D.

A lovely color scheme for this room would be coral, green, and white. To carry out the scheme you could use a gay floral chintz with coral flowers, green leaves, and white backgrounds for the drapes and bedspread. Or you could use white ruffled organdy for the curtains and the dressing table cover. With this, use the floral chintz for the bedspread, curtain tiebacks and the cushion cover for the wicker chair. Paint the furniture and chair white. The throw rugs could be white or green shag rugs.

How do you wash and care for a mahogany salad bowl set? L. B. H.

Wood salad bowls should be washed and dried as soon as they are used. If oil and moisture is allowed to stand on the surface, the finish could be softened and might eventually peel. Also, if left wet for prolonged periods, the bowl could warp. When washed and thoroughly dried, the bowls should be stored where they are not subjected to extremes of temperature. Also, they should be stored on a level surface—not allowed to stand on edge which might warp them.

Tell R. G. K. to try this recipe for Brown Sugar Pie:

1 cup brown sugar
Butter, size of an egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
salt.

Beat egg (medium), mix with brown sugar, creamed with the butter, add vanilla and salt. Pour in pie crust and bake slowly—that's the secret—bake slowly—and the pie won't boil over and will be of a jellied consistency. A dip of vanilla ice cream in a brown sugar tart is delicious. M. V. R.

Thank you so much, M. V. R., for this recipe and dessert suggestion.

I promised to make some dolls' clothes for a bazaar which is going to be held soon, and I need a couple of dolls to use as a dress form. To fit the patterns I bought, one of them should be 18 inches in length and 9½ inches in the bust, and the other one 15 inches and 9½ inches. It seems no sense to buy new dolls just for this purpose and I wonder if some of your readers could loan or donate old discarded dolls. The heads and hands may be broken, but the body, legs, and arms should be in good condition. T. Y.

Do any of our readers have old dolls answering this description that they would like to put up for adoption?

SOS. Please tell me how I can remove perspiration stains that are just over a year old on my wedding gown. I carelessly put it away after my wedding and now I find ugly yellow stains under the arms. It is made of marquisette and I wish now to make an evening gown out of it. Also, please tell me what kind of paper it should be wrapped in hereafter when stored. I had it wrapped only in white tissue paper in a large cardboard box. A. O. H.

Since I presume the wedding dress is white, you should be able to remove the stains by using one of the several bleaches which are safe on rayon marquisette. You may have to try more than one before the stain is completely removed.

Start by sponging with hydrogen peroxide to which you have added one teaspoon of sodium perborate per pint of peroxide. Both can be purchased at a drug store. Be sure to use the peroxide immediately upon removing it from the bottle as it soon loses its strength.

To apply, place an absorbent pad under the stain and lightly sponge the peroxide-perborate mixture onto the stain. Be gentle, for the fabric may be weakened at the stain and break easily. Let stand, then rinse gently but thoroughly.

If this doesn't completely remove the stain, try the color remover product sold where dyes are sold. Mix two teaspoons of color remover to a pint of water and apply as above.

White fabrics usually discolor less if wrapped in navy blue or black tissue paper.

Could you tell me where I might buy the type of lacquer which is used to prevent tarnishing of bright brass fixtures, also antique brass? H. F. S.

Clear brushing lacquer is used on metal to prevent tarnish. One store which sells it can be reached by calling District 1130.

I have a small electric heater, 1600 watt element, which produces 5400 BTUs heat per hour. How much does this cost in money per hour? Our location is near Bethesda. W. P.

The Potomac Electric & Power Co. tells me it costs you between 3½ and 4 cents per hour to operate your heater.

One of my friends has invited me to a "cake cutting" for a girl who is engaged. I wish that you would advise me as to what is meant by a "cake cutting." B. S.

I wonder if any of our readers could tell us what a "cake cutting" is? The only information I have been able to get on it is that it is probably a bridal shower.

Swan Queen Shops

This Little Ballet Dancer Went to Market, Splurged

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

GUESS how Margot Fonteyn and Robert Helpmann, the Sadler's Wells Ballet's principal stars, spent their last afternoon in Washington! At the National Gallery of Art? The Lincoln or Jefferson Memorial? The Washington Monument? The Smithsonian? The Zoo? Nope, nope, nope, nope! They spent it in a huge modern grocery store being initiated into the mysteries of cash-and-carry.

It was a lovely sight to watch Miss Fonteyn pointing out different items with the same graceful arm undulation she used so effectively as the Swan Queen and to see Robert Helpmann pushing the wire carryall, moving with smoothly pivoting hips as he indicated cereals, pickles and canned goods with a dramatically flexed index finger!

The dancers were so pleased with the whole shopping idea that they kept piling groceries in the basket—to such extent that their agreeable Washington host has his larder stocked for the next month. And not only with necessities but with all sorts of queer condiments and foods heretofore never suspected of being trapped in a can!

Her Wardrobe Is Enviable

ANYWAY, the expedition helped take their mind off the ghastly condition of the Constitution Hall stage floor which almost brought about their career-ending with a broken toe!

Miss Fonteyn, not at all incidentally, possesses the most enviable wardrobe. At an after-theater supper given for the ballet company at the British Embassy, she wore a cream-colored satin Dior dress. Buttoned tight at her miniscule waist, the tightly swathed skirt cascaded in off-side panels to form a train. The jacket, impractical but enchanting, was single-sleeved, embroidered with dangling crystal beads and tied with double satin streamers to the opposite shoulder strap.

The new Washington edition of "Your Handbag Directory," will soon be on local news stands. It's the small, pocketsized directory which lists every kind of useful address, from "Accordionist" to "Wall Papers" and, in the Capital, is compiled by Mrs. W. Jasper DuBose and Mrs. Robert G. McKay.

The directory, which was thought up by Mrs. Donald F. McPherson some three years ago, has burgeoned profitably and this season will make its debut in 20 United States cities—plus Paris, Rome and Toronto. The New York edition is headed by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and her daughter Ethel Russell while the Paris book will be in charge of Lady Macready, the Duc de Noailles' daughter, who was so popular when her husband, Sir Gordon Macready, was stationed here.

Proved to Be a Gold Mine

THE "handbag directory" has proved a minor gold mine for Mrs. McPherson and her associates. Each entry is paid for by the store or person listed; but to take the curse of commercialization off, the compilers personally guarantee as reliable everything listed. It's not only a handy medium for prestige advertising but an effective help for anyone searching out "little women" to sew a fine seam, or someone to repair broken treasures.

50% Drop From High School

AT THE MOST important time in their lives, a shocking number of teen-agers are dropping out of schools, say American education authorities. The reason advanced is that high school programs do not meet their needs.

More than half of the boys and girls who enter high school leave before they are graduated. "If we didn't have effective compulsory education laws," says Dr. Harold J. Dillon, director of the Public Education and Child Labor Association, "we might not even be holding in school the number we do."

Under Dr. Dillon's direction an intensive study was made of reasons for leaving school. He writes in the Woman's Home Companion of the results.

Parents are largely unaware of the problem, he says, but educators are thinking seriously about it. All have come to the same conclusion—the youngsters left school because in one way or another it failed to interest or satisfy them.

Mme. Pandit Affirms Faith in Peace

By Nicha Souré

Peace is not an anemic damsel in a white nightgown, as it is usually depicted, Mme. Pandit said yesterday.

She spoke briefly to District members of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, at a tea given for them at the Indian Embassy.

"To me, peace is a beautiful woman," the Ambassador from India continued. "A woman fully grown and radiant with love of the human race."

Throughout the years, Mme. Pandit said, war has been described as the great adventure and death on the battlefield as the highest form of national service. "It is my view that the adventure of living is far more noble, more exciting than that of dying and the highest form of service to one's nation or to the world is to live for humanity and to serve it according to one's ability and strength."

The Ambassador of India paid tribute to Mahatma Gandhi. She praised him for calling women in large numbers to join India's fight for political emancipation.

"Participation in the nationalist movement inevitably led to participation in the victory, and women in India, like women in the West, after the war found themselves in a position to demand and receive the privileges which were the result of success."

She enumerated the progress India has made in the last few years but added that there was much to be done. "But we are confident that our determination to succeed will help us forward at an ever increasing pace."

In order that the spark of war may not be rekindled in the world, Mme. Pandit advocated the removal of causes which hasten wars such as poverty, want, discrimination and colonial rule.

"We must direct our efforts toward the ending of colonial rule where it still exists," she continued, "toward reaffirming faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity, and worth of the human person through abolition of all forms of discrimination, and by granting of equality of opportunity to all men and women regardless of race and religion."

Mme. Pandit received the 150 league members in the reception room of the embassy. Her recorded talk will be broadcast over WWDC tonight.

Tells About Trip

THE airplane and the new currency devaluation have brought a European vacation within the range of professional women with limited time and budget, Miss Grace McGerr, vice president of the Altrusa Club, told fellow members at a dinner meeting last night at the Brookings Institution.

Miss McGerr, an attorney in the United States Department of Agriculture, recounted her impressions of a recent five-week airplane tour of England, Ireland, France and Switzerland. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Patricia McGerr.

"Highlighting our London visit was the experience of sitting in a box next to the flower-bedecked box of Queen Mary, the honor guest at the royal premiere of J. Arthur Rank's film "Christopher Columbus." The Misses McGeers were among Mr. Rank's guests at the premiere.

Talks to Zontians

THE FOUNDERS of Zonta Clubs had tremendous vision when they planned an organization for business and professional women to discuss their problems and projects, Mabel Strider told Washington Zontians yesterday on the club's thirtieth birthday.

Friendship and good will were the natural results of this group, Miss Strider added at the luncheon meeting at the Dodge Hotel.

The Zonta International has established an Amelia Earhart scholarship of $1000 to be awarded annually to a qualified young woman for graduate study in aeronautical engineering. The scholarship was established 10 years ago in honor of the noted aviatrix, who was a member of the New York Zonta Club.

Addresses Hadassah

MRS. MARCELLA RUBEL told the Washington Chapter of Hadassah her first-hand impressions of Israel at the H-Day membership drive brunch Tuesday at Hotel 2400.

Hadassah's role, not only as a teacher of children, but as a teacher of teachers, is well-recognized in Israel, Mrs. Rubel said. "Dieticians, occupational therapists and nurses are but a few of the professional people for whom Hadassah provides training in its schools in Israel and who in turn go out and teach others."

For Hospital Aid

DR. WINFRED OVERHOLSER praised the Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle for their work at St. Elizabeth's Hospital at the circle's fifteenth annual donor luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday.

For 26 years the circle has been working to make the lives of the Jewish patients more comfortable, Dr. Overholser, superintendent of the hospital, said.

Not only does the circle provide ceremonial food for patients during the religious holidays of the Jewish year, but in addition its members have resumed visits to individual patients, Dr. Overholser told the 400 women attending.

Hints for Care Of Furnishings

REVERSE the position of your floor coverings twice a year to distribute the wear evenly.

Add a little starch when doing up cretonne slipcovers. It will take away that flimsy look and keeps the material clean longer.

The wise laundress wrings out table linen by hand. Then she does not have obstinate creases, difficult to iron out.

Put a few drops of sweet oil or glycerin on the cogs of the food chopper and stop that tremendous effort that is so unnecessary while grinding.

About the most important thing to remember in regard to the wear of linoleum is to prevent water from getting into the seams and under it. Always wipe dry after cleaning and prevent this from happening.

Resurgence Try by Soviet In Berlin Told

Berlin, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy said today the Russians tried to regain their veto power over Berlin affairs during four-power talks last September.

McCloy, in a report to Washington covering the first three weeks of that month, said the Soviets also sought a "virtual annulment" of the broad powers granted the West Berlin city government by the western powers after Russian obstruction tactics resulted in the breakdown of Berlin's four-power administration.

He said the Russians also sought recognition of the Soviet sector's government, "which is devoid of any constitutional basis."

The four-power discussions held by the city's commandants were called off by the western powers September 28 in reprisal for Russian refusal to honor the agreement which ended the city's railway strike.

McCloy said "little progress" was made in the four-power talks on normalization of Berlin life, the goal set for the commandants by the Paris conference of big four foreign ministers.

Nehru Heckled By Students

London, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Indian students studying in England demonstrated against Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru today as he arrived for a speech at London University.

The demonstrators distributed anti-Indian government pamphlets and patrolled the area with a loudspeaker blaring slogans such as "Restore Civil Liberties in India" and "Rid India of Corruption."

One student thrust a pamphlet into Nehru's hands as he arrived at London University building to address the London branch of the India League. It accused the government of suppressing speech and thought in India and called on Nehru to free political prisoners in India.

The premier glared angrily at the demonstrators but said nothing. Later he told the India League members that he deplored the action of Indians demonstrating against their government while in a foreign country.

"It lowers India's credit in the eyes of the world," he said.

Inventories Rise $150,000,000 Above August Figure

Businessmen, recovering from their "depression" jitters of the first half of the year, began to increase inventories in September, Commerce Department figures indicated yesterday.

Business inventories rose in September by $150,000,000 above the August level, the Department said. This was the first monthly increase since November a year ago, when stocks were at their peak.

About one third of the increase was in stocks of auto dealers. Sizable increases also occurred among furniture, apparel and general merchandise stores. Smaller gains were made in almost every major line of retail trade.

Petrillo Union Settles Dispute With AGVA

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Settlement of a dispute between the AFL American Guild of Variety Artists and James C. Petrillo's American Federation of Musicians (AFL) was formally disclosed today as the case came up for State Supreme Court trial.

Attorneys for both sides signed a stipulation discontinuing the suit. They declined to reveal the settlement terms.

The dispute stemmed from a Petrillo order that no member of the AFM can be a member of AGVA. To restrain Petrillo from enforcing this order AGVA sought a temporary injunction.

Lila Leeds Banished From Coast 5 Years

Hollywood, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Starlet Lila Leeds, who pleaded guilty to being drunk while on probation for smoking marijuana with Robert Mitchum, agreed today to leave California for five years.

Superior Judge Clement D. Nye made leaving the State a condition of extending her probation period after the offense. The blonde dancer said she would take a $1200 a week night club job in Cincinnati.

Men (or women) need not be "experienced" automobile salesmen to qualify, but should have clean record of dependability, industry and adaptability. Maybe there's a retiring Army colonel or Navy captain who could work into our needs to our mutual profit and enjoyment—or a young man or young woman, not completely satisfied with their rate of advancement in the insurance, real estate or some other specialty selling field. Tell us enough about yourself in a chatty letter to permit us to judge your interests, associations, personality and capacity, and give us a phone number where you can be reached (day or evening) for a personal phone interview. War Heroes Hailed At Film Premiere

Post Reporter

A gold-braid, top-bracket audience last night interrupted the preview showing of a new film about World War II to applaud a general whose name has become synonymous with the Battle of Bastogne, Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe.

The general was by no means the hero of the picture, "Battleground," devoted almost exclusively to a platoon of GIs during the Battle of the Bulge. But his presence, and that of two men of the 101st Airborne Division, M/Sgt. Frank J. Marchesa and Cpl. Chelby Charles, jr., in the audience gave the personal note to a memorable preview.

International Premiere

The picture, which will not be shown in Washington for at least a month, is having an international world premiere Armistice Day and is by all odds the finest film to come out of World War II.

Distinguished by realism of both setting and dialogue, it was punctuated throughout by laughs of the heart, not the belly-laughs of slapstick, but the hard, hearty sounds of recognition for moments that were so tough to live through that harsh mirth was the only salvation.

Crowds lined F. street watching the invited audience arrive before a guard of soldiers stationed in the District. Figures of the Army and Air Force as well as some Navy uniforms were in the crowd attending the picture dedicated to the non-glamorous infantry.

Producer Rewarded

Before the film started an Army Certificate of Merit was presented to Dore Schary, producer of the M-G-M picture by Maj. Gen. McAuliffe, signed by Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, also in the audience.

Schary also received a plaque from the 101st Airborne Division Association, presented by Sergt. Marchesa and Corpl. Charlee Charles.

Featured in the film, George Murphy, John Hodiak and Miss Denise Darcel took bows from the stage.

Wife of Von Paulus Dies at Baden Baden

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 9 (U.P.). Mrs. Constance von Paulus, 60-year-old wife of former German Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus whose army surrendered to the Russians at Stalingrad, died today at Baden Baden, in the French occupation zone.

She had suffered from a liver ailment. Von Paulus, who still is in a Russian prison, wrote her recently that he expected to be home by the end of this year.

Sir Thomas Gives Varied Concert

By Paul Hume

Rule Britannia!

Sir Thomas Beecham took over Constitution Hall last night, where the Sadler's Wells Ballet Company had reigned for two days.

England gave the world one of most engaging musical geniuses when it presented Sir Thomas Beecham to the spheres of opera, ballet and spmphony.

Most Mellow Mood

Beecham's program last night showed only a corner of his vast repertoire, but it was a varied and alluring corner. A Handel suite in the conductor's own arrangement opened the evening with rarest spirit. Much of the music is considerably enriched by Sir Thomas's own ideas but the elan is that of Handel in his most mellow mood.

Mozart is another name perennially associated with Beecham. Tonight Sir Thomas will speak on the great composer in the Library of Congress. For over two decades Beecham has consistently given some of the greatest interpretations of his music.

Yet last night's version of the Haffner symphony in D Major was different from what we have come to expect. We can only refer Sir Thomas to his own scintillant recording for further comment. Last night found retards scattered through the work, particularly in the middle movements. These do not appear in the recording at all. A man can always change his mind and we enjoyed the outer movements of the symphony to the fullest. But we prefer Sir Thomas' own earlier account of the andante and menuet.

Excellent Precision

The National Symphony played wonderfully for Beecham throughout the concert. The tone and precision of the whole body, which is constantly improving, was excellent. The conductor's own opinion of the orchestra was displayed when he canceled three out of the five rehearsals he originally requested.

Beecham also retained the revised seating of the orchestra which Mitchell has showed to be so tangible an improvement. The program concluded with the third symphony of Brahms and the march from the Trojans by Berlioz. Again the outer movements surpassed the middle portions of the Brahms. Over deliberate pacing in Brams can allow things to lag even when beautiful.

The Berlioz march was thunder and fire and made a stunning close. A packed house recalled the conductor time after time, to praise his superb work and to thank the man for his great services to music. It was a thrilling evening.

Tavenner to Speak

Frank S. Tavenner, jr., general counsel, House Un-American Activities Committee, will speak at the weekly luncheon of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at 12:30 p. m. today in the ballroom of the Burlington Hotel.

THE MAN WHO—

The Family Scrapbook

Away From the Nest

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Children grow up. One of the ways in which they show this is by not staying around home as much as they did when younger. Bill pals around with the boys. Lucille is almost always with her girl friends. This "growing away" from the family is perfectly natural and normal. It does not indicate that in some way or other we have fallen down in bringing up the youngsters.

Nonetheless, it is still "hard to take' 'for most parents.

Recently our 17-year-old boy returned from three months as a camp counselor in northern California. Within 10 days he was due to leave for the university. A new girl friend, reunion with the high school classmates, and a variety of last-minute prepaartions for college meant that we had him with us at the beach for only a couple of days. At other times in the last five or six years we have had similar experiences with hi mand his twin sisters.

Yes, it's hard, but we must content ourselves with a more mature companionship with our grown-up children, realizing that in our society it is desirable that they move out of the home nest.

What's the Verdict?

Compensation

Q. An employe of a brewing company was injured while unloading beer kegs. The Workmen's Compensation Board awarded him $4200, payable $100 monthly. A year later he was killed in a motor-car crash, at which time one month's compensation payment was due and unpaid, in addition to the balance not yet due. He left no will. His estate sues for the unpaid amount of the $4200 award. What result?

A. The theory of the estate's suit is that when an order of $4200 was made, it created ownership of the $4200 in the employe. But a compensation award is designed to replace one's earning capacity while he is disabled (under the usual United States statute, as in the District). Thus upon the employe's death or upon his ability to resume work, the award would cease. Here, the estate is entitled to the month's sum already due, but it is not entitled to that for the future months in which the employe did not live. F. L. D.

AND THEN IN HIS RECIPE HERE, MARCEL LAMAZE SAYS TO ADD A CLOVE OF GARLIC.
GOOD HEAVENS! THE GARLIC WAS RIGHT HERE! IT'S GONE!
COMPOUND YOU, WILLIE! YOU MUST HAVE PUT NAPOLEON DOWN THERE BY THE FURNACE. THE PIPES ARE DELIVERING GARLIC TO EVERY ROOM IN THE HOUSE.

You were the first to comfort me . . . And hold me close to you . . . And when I kissed your lips it seemed . . . That all my dreams came true . . . You held my hand and walked with me . . . When stars were in the sky . . . And I enjoyed your every word . . . And treasured every sigh . . . And though the moons have come and gone . . . And months have turned to years . . . You still inspire me to live . . . With all my smiles and tears . . . And so I want your heart to know . . . My gratitude today . . . For all that you have given me . . . In your devoted way . . . THE DISTRICT LINE — by Bill Gold

Too Bad We Don't Have The Guard's Name

Mention of his name recalls the perfectly wonderful incident that took place some 16 years ago, at Arlington National Cemetery.

The "no pictures" order had been handed down from on high, but Wilson and another cameraman decided to try to sneak some shots anyhow.

An alert guard nabbed them, and demanded to see their credentials. Our boy handed over his press card, and the dubious guard murmured: "Woodrow Wilson, eh? And I suppose this other guy is Christopher Columbus?"

PUN FUN

Inasmuch as you've probably heard the story, there's no point in telling you about the tomcat who explained his interest in a tennis match by confiding: "My father is in the racket."

HIGHWAY LINES

Dave Coulter of 3324 Newark st. nw., raises an extremely interesting question regarding the lane lines on Rockville Pike.

Dave contends that in at least 10 locations, the lines are the exact reverse of what they should be, and as a result direct motorists into unsafe traffic practices.

When a three-lane highway is level, the center portion is reserved for passing in either direction.

But on approaches to hills, the white lines usually herd both streams of traffic to their right, to eliminate passing on the upgrade.

The reason is obvious. Vision is limited on a hill, and acceleration difficult. To permit the center lane to be used for passing is to invite a head-on crash with traffic coming to the crest of the hill from the opposite direction.

But Dave says that in many places on Rockville Pike the white lines permit passing up to the crest of the hill, then prohibit it on the down grade, where conditions for passing are far superior.

GIVE-AWAYS

CLUB NEWS

There will be a business meeting of the District Line Club at the Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw., at 8 o'clock tonight. Research assignments will be made to those who volunteer to work on the club's forthcoming book.

BACK TO NORMALCY

Now that the election is over, Mr. Dulles can go back to being a statesman again.

MARATHON LOVER

The fellow whose wife tried to kill him because he made continuous love to her for 15 years has inspired two District Liners to burst into verse. To wit:

Please tell me that you love me, dear;
And hold me nice and tight.
But please don't try to do it, Pet,
Each morning, noon and night.

David Kandel.
1311 H st. nw.

It's good to know you love me, and
That you'll be ever mine.
But everlasting, constant love
Is where I draw the line.

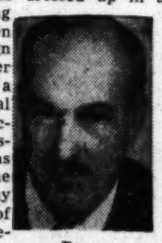
Merry-Go-Round

Feud Laid To Bare GOP Cupboard

By Drew Pearson

Resignation of isolationist insurance man James Kemper as treasurer of the GOP National Committee was dressed up in a high-sounding smoke screen about foreign policy in order to cover up a bitter personal GOP feud. Actually, his resignation was handed in one hour after Guy Gabrielson of New Jersey became the new national chairman last August, but it was agreed to delay the announcement until the political horiizon was calmer.



Pearson

Kemper's exit puts the spotlight on some red faces and raw nerves inside the GOP Committee, which probably will be smoothed over now that he is out. Although Kemper talked big about lack of funds in the GOP treasury, real fact is that he was never much of a money-raiser. The best GOP money-raiser was the man Kemper and Dewey ousted as GOP national finance chairman after the 1948 convention—Walter Hope.

Hope, an able New York lawyer, learned of his resignation by reading it in the morning papers, and his friends claim that the shock was responsible for his death a month or so later. Hope left in the treasury a surplus of $800,000 after the Philadelphia convention.

He was replaced by Bourbon Prince Harold Talbot, eager aspirant to the Court of St. James's whose family had almost ordered their clothes for their presentation to the King—when they heard the news of Dewey's defeat. Between January, 1948, and August 4, when GOP Chairman Hugh Scott resigned, Talbot had raised the magnificent sum of $71,000—while Scott and Kemper were spending money at the rate of $80,000 a month.

Talbot's main excuse was that he couldn't collect funds because of the Omaha GOP fight. And when it became apparent that Guy Gabrielson was to be the new chairman, Talbot began a quiet campaign against him which culminated in a lunch at which he and Gabrielson patched up their differences. That same night, however, Talbot dined with an oil executive who reported back to the new GOP chairman that Talbot had begun his attack all over again.

With Sinclair Weeks of Massachusetts now in charge of the national finance committee, finances are improving. Johnny Hanes, one-time member of the Roosevelt Administration, is vice chairman, and some of the big contributors already have promised to kick in.

Steel Vs. Government

While the United States Steel Corp. was using its influence against a settlement of the strike, it was also trying to increase its tremendous hold on the steel industry through the United States Government.

Its latest proposed acquisition is a Government wartime shipyard at Orange, Tex., which it plans to convert into a factory for making steel pipe for the oil industry. The shipyard was purchased by United States Steel's wholly owned subsidiary, Consolidated Steel, upon whose property the yard was built. Then alert Herbert Bergson, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, ruled that this would increase United States Steel's monopoly position and would be against the best interests of the United States.

However, this didn't please Congressman J. M. Coombs and other Texas politicos who thereupon pushed a resolution through both houses of Congress authorizing the shipyard facilities to be sold to United States Steel.

Once before congressional and White House pressure was used to increase United States Steel's hold on the industry. After the war, when the Government advertised its Geneva, Utah, steel plant for sale, once again the Justice Department's antitrust division ruled that any sale to United States Steel would be against the best interests of the Nation.

However, then Senator Abe Murdock of Utah, now a labor relations commissioner, pulled every wire possible to sell the Government property to U. S. Steel. Simultaneously, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, a good friend of U. S. Steel President Ben Fairless, was given credit for talking to the White House.

At any rate, President Truman personally directed Attorney General Tom Clark to overrule his antitrust division and decree that there was no objection to selling the Government's Utah steel plant to U. S. Steel.

Thus the steel corporation has been in the fortunate position of being able to thumb its nose at President Truman's fact-finding board and at the same time get President Truman's help in tightening its monopoly hold of the steel industry.
